U.S. Veto Draws Arab Anger

Times News Services

The Arab world reacted angrily today to the United States veto of a UN Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its punitive air raids against Lebanon and Syria.

Syria threatened "hard strikes" at the interests of countries it said were supporting Israel.

Relations between Egypt and West Germany also took a sharp turn for the worse.

Egypt rejected today as "unconvincing and insufficient" the West German explanation of statements made following the Munich Olympics slayings last week. Egypt also was angry because the Arabs were referred to as "terrorists," whereas they are regarded in the Arab world as heroes.

There was more violence. A man believed to have been a Moroccan Arab lured Israeli diplomat Ophir Zadok to a Brussels restaurant Sunday night and shot him, wounding him seriously.

He had promised information about an impending Arab attack against an "Israeli object."

This brought an angry statement from an Israeli political source in Tel Aviv who said the shooting illustrated the need for international action against Arab guerrillas intent on attacking Jewish targets throughout the world.

The sequence of events began last Tuesday morning in the Israeli section of the Olympic village in Munich when Arab guerrillas killed two Israeis and kidnapped nine others who subsequently were murdered. Five guerrillas, 11 Israeis and a West German policeman died.

A police spokesman in Munich reported that police arrested a Syrian Arab at Munich airport Sunday on suspicion he might have been connected with the guerrilla attack.

Police said they had nothing definite against him, that it was a precautionary arrest and that the man was being questioned. Three other Arabs were arrested at the time.

The first anti-American statement stemming from the events came today in Cairo where the 18-nation Arab League expressed its "dismay" over the Security Council failure to condemn the Israeli air attacks. The United States vetoed the measure because id did not allude to the Munich massacre.

The Middle East News Agency, in reporting the League statement, said the U.S. use of the veto is "practically a support of Israeli aggression."

A Syrian commentary broadcast over Baghdad Radio and monitored in Beirut said the Israeli strikes against Syria and Lebanon were "premeditated and prepared in advance by the Israeli state of aggression." It said the U.S. veto showed that "Israel is one of the states of the United States of America."

"Our people will use all its potential to repel the aggression and direct hard strikes against the interests of those who are supporting the aggression and standing on the side of the enemy (Israel) giving it all support and aid," the Syrian broadcast said.

Less Down For Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower down payments for home purchasers is one of the main targets of changes to National Housing Act financing announced Monday.

The amendments to NHA regulations raise the maximum mortgage loan for new, single family homes to $30,000 from $25,000 and to 95 per cent of appraised value.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said the changes reduce down payment requirements by as much as one-third on the average NHA-financed house. In some cases, down payments would be cut by as much as 70 per cent.

On single-family dwellings, the amount of income that can be used to cover mortgage payments and property taxes has been increased to 30 per cent from 27 per cent. In calculating income, the full earnings of both husband and wife may be taken into account.

Under the old rules, gross income included only the borrower's earnings plus 50 per cent of the spouse's income.

REDUCE DOWN PAYMENT

The higher maximum loan is aimed at reducing down payments, the CMHC said.

Loans have now been set at a straight 95 per cent of appraised value instead of 95 per cent of the first $20,000 and 80 per cent of the remaining amount.

These rules apply to purchase of new houses.

Where existing homes are being bought, the maximum loan has been increased to $23,000 from $18,000. Loans are still based on 95 per cent of appraised value.

Maximum loans for housing co-operatives and condominium apartments has been raised to $23,000 from $18,000.

The loan ceiling for houses built for rent will rise to $30,000 from $25,000 while the maximum for apartment units jumps to $20,000 from $18,000.

Loans for hostel accommodation for elderly persons will increase to $10,000 a bed from $7,000 per bed. For student housing, the new maximum is $8,000 a bed rather than $7,000.

CMHC will also grant loans for facilities in housing developments apart from parking and recreational space. These facilities can be commercial or non-commercial.

CAN REDUCE RENT

In rental housing projects, the revenue from commercial facilities can be used to reduce rents charged to low-income tenants, the corporation said.

Up to 15 per cent of the maximum loan would be permitted for additional facilities. For example, in a 50-unit rental project the maximum loan would be 50 times $20,000 or $1 million. The loan would be increased by $150,000 for additional facilities.

TROUBLED GAMES WIND UP TODAY

Times News Services

MUNICH — West Germany won the last gold medal of the 20th Olympiad, but that was the host country's closing consolation as the most troubled games in history wound up today before a capacity crowd of 80,000 fans.

The Germans won the equestrian team jumping — final event of the 1972 games — by edging the U.S. Italy took the bronze while Canada, which won the event at Mexico City four years ago, finished sixth.

Before the Olympic flame was extinguished, the games were marred by tragedy, controversy and political bitterness, leaving the Olympic movement — dedicated to peace — shattered and subdued. It was especially so after 11 Israeli Olympians were slain by Arab terrorists.

It will be four years before the next games — to be staged in Montreal in 1976 — and it may take that long before some of the memories of the "troubled games" can be forgotten.

Kissinger Talks In Moscow

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's special adviser on security affairs, today begins three days of talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Vietnam, trade, European security and attempts to further limit strategic arms will top the agenda.

Two days before Kissinger's arrival, Premier Alexei Kosygin received East German Ambassador Horst Bittner, apparently to hear his country's views on a proposed European security conference.

The two Germanies play key roles in preparation for a conference on security and co-operation in Europe and for the talks on reduction of armed forces in Central Europe which the U.S. and its allies want to take place simultaneously, political sources said.

Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's highest ranking peace negotiator, also was in Moscow briefly for talks with Soviet officials but he flew today to Paris and it was uncertain whether he had talked with Kissinger. He had talked with Communist officials in Hanoi, Peking and Moscow, raising the possibility of a new round of secret talks.

In Saigon, the Viet Cong issued a new peace statement today, saying it is "prepared to accept a provisional government of national concord that shall be dominated by neither side."

Ulster Blast Kills 3 Men

Times News Services

Three soldiers were killed by "the largest bomb yet" in Northern Ireland, a 500-pound blockbuster which destroyed a 10-ton armored car Sunday night.

Two soldiers inside the six-wheel vehicle were killed outright when the land mine blew up under the armored car, flipped it on its back and sent it flying upside down 20 yards along a quiet country road near Dungannon in County Tyrone.

Two of the other five soldiers in the Saracen vehicle had to be cut free with acetylene torches. One of them died in a military hospital this morning. Two others are in critical condition.

"It was the biggest bomb experienced in Northern Ireland," an army spokesman said. "It had been planted in a culvert beneath the road and was detonated with a wire by guerrillas waiting 70 yards away."

The deaths brought to 125 the number of British troopers killed in three years of Ulster violence, which has taken 557 lives in all.

Meanwhile, in Belfast, members of the parliamentary Protestant Ulster Defense Association (UDA) and the political Vanguard Front Organization (VFO) announced they were patching up their differences to oppose "ineffectual" British Ulster policy.

The new resolve grew out of a gunfight Thursday between UDA men and British troops, the first such army-Protestant clash in three years of troubles.

"There is a far greater determination to present a united, common front than ever before," said Austin Ardill, a ranking officer in VFO, headed by former Home Affairs Minister William Craig.

Vanguard, formed in February, claims a membership of 60,000. The UDA has said it can muster an "army" of 50,000 to counterbalance the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA). Evidence indicates the memberships overlap.

More than 200 workers, angered by British paratroop patrols at their Belfast power plant, walked off their jobs today. Officials said a spread of the protest could lead to blackouts across the city.

The strike was timed to coincide with the funerals of two Protestants shot during the clash between Protestants and paratroops in the Shankhill Road area Thursday.

And in Londonderry, political scurces said Sean MacStiofain had survived an attempt to oust him as chief of staff of the provisional wing of the IRA only by agreeing to stop bombing civilian targets and to provide better training for IRA bombers.

Quebec Split Seen In Trudeau Report

HULL, Que. (CP) — A report said to have been commissioned by Prime Minister Trudeau says the separation of Quebec is feasible and recommends Canada reject a monetary union with an independent Quebec, Jacques Parizeau, Parti Quebecois economist, said Sunday.

He told a party symposium that the report, which he said he obtained from a member of Trudeau's staff, was the result of a study of the PQ manifesto published in April.

In Ottawa the prime minister's office said today it did carry out a study "in a very narrow sense" on the Parti Quebecois manifesto, published last spring.

"We look at a lot of documents and obviously we looked at the implications of this one," a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau said in an interview.

"And that's about where Parizeau's stuff stops being accurate," he added.

The report proposes Canada reject any monetary union and suggests an independent Quebec be urged to devalue its currency by 15 per cent in relation to the Canadian dollar, Parizeau said.

Trudeau believes in independence for Quebec less than any one else, Parizeau said, "but now he is beginning to doubt."

"The general conclusion of the document is that political

NOT IN RACE, SAYS BENNETT

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, whose Social Credit governernment was defeated by the New Democratic Party in the Aug. 30 provincial election, said today he will not contest a party leadership convention to be held next May.

However, he declined to comment when asked whether he would resign his seat as an MLA, or whether he would support any particular candidate for the leadership.

George Driediger, president of the Social Credit League, announced today that Bennett had initiated the decision to hold a leadership convention.

Asked later whether the statement meant that Bennett was going to step down, even though this was not officially announced, Driediger said:

"You've hit the nail on the head. This is what I believe will happen. But it's up to the premier to make any statement on his retirement."

Industry 'Bums' Remain Target

Times News Services

"Corporate welfare bums" — be warned: David Lewis and the New Democratic Party are not through with you yet.

"Anyone who says David Lewis has shot his bolt on the tax issue should be forewarned that we have just cocked the rifle," says Lewis.

"And it's not a single shooter."

The shooting will go on throughout the campaign, he adds, and the "corporate welfare system" will be its leading issue.

Lewis, 63, got his party's campaign for the Oct. 30 federal election officially under way Sunday with a speech to 300 party faithful at the Royal York Hotel before flying to Vancouver today for press interviews and then on to Edmonton tonight.

"Officially," because Lewis really launched his campaign several weeks ago by singling out — and naming — several large corporations he said were being given unfair tax concessions. He called these corporations "corporate welfare bums."

The phrase caught on and the NDP had an issue.

In his Toronto speech, Lewis unveiled "another aspect" of the same theme. Tax deferments.

By the end of 1971, Lewis said, corporations had amassed some $3.6 billion in tax deferrments — almost $1 billion more than the total budget of the department of national health and welfare.

Naming names and supplying figures as usual, Lewis listed six large corporations which he said together accounted for $1 billion in tax deferrments.

These were, he said, International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., the Steel Company of Canada Ltd., (Stelco) Bell Canada, Alcan Aluminum, Dominion Foundaries and Steel Ltd., (Dofasco) and Imperial Oil.

Under the law, tax deferments can be obtained with speeded-up write-offs for depreciation and depletion on new equipment.

According to Finance Minister John Turner, the practice has been in the tax law

Churchmen Arm To Nab Burglars

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — The Rev. Dewey Pinckney looked at the shambles of his St. Mary's Baptist Church sanctuary and became sickened.

Then he became angry. Very angry.

A window air conditioner was pulled from its frame and a communion table was turned over. Thieves had carelessly tossed a bible in front of Pickney's pulpit. The only item actually stolen was a vacuum cleaner.

But this was the last straw for Pinckney. He resolved it would never happen again.

The men of St. Mary's met the next night and formed an armed vigilante committee. The next day, the St. Mary's committee joined with committees from five other small churches — Mt. Zion Baptist, Iglehart Chapel of God and Christ Church, Marshall Chapel, Macedonia Baptist and Bethel Baptist.

Now, 24 hours a day, except on Sunday when the churches are in use most of the day, vigilantes in a car periodically check the six churches. Sometimes there is one man in the car, sometimes two or three, depending on the time of day or night.

Vigilante committee members are armed.

"It would be kind of hard to get out and look for something like that if we didn't have any means of protection," Pinckney said.

The Rev. Frank Montgomery, pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church, is chairman of the project.

Pinckney's church and Mt. Zion are in a municipal No-Man's land between Waco and the suburb of Bellmead. The churches lack police protection, except what the sheriff's department can provide.

The other four churches are in Waco.

St. Mary's was dedicated in January. In the first burglary, the thieves made off with a $495 window air conditioner. Pinckney believes the only reason they did not get away with an air conditioner the second time was because they were frightend away.

Mt. Zion was broken into a week before the second St. Mary's buglary. Iglehart was entered between 1 and 3 p.m. on a recent Sunday and a radio and some of the pastor's things taken.

"The others just figured it was a matter of time," Pinckney said.

Former Spy Tracked Down in Western Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says it has tracked down a Soviet spy whose existence was dismissed last March by the Canadian government as a "fiction partly based on fact."

The newspaper says the spy, known by the code name of Anton Sabotka, lives in a Western Canadian city and works as a salesman.

The Star says that Sabotka admitted his identity and confirmed he was trained by the KGB the Soviet secret police — and assigned to the Canadian west to study targets for sabotage in the event of war or some crisis.

The newspaper said that Sabotka is in his early 40s, was born in Montreal, but returned to Czechoslovakia with is parents at 16. The Star did not disclose Sabotka's actual name or the western city in which he resides because he had refused to talk unless his anonymity was protected.

The newspaper says that Sabotka was recruited by the Soviets in 1964 after a chance meeting with a stranger in a Prague coffee house. He agreed to take spy training in Moscow after the Soviets said he would be stationed in Canada.

After 11 months of training as a spy, he returned to Prague and made application to go back to Canada.

After landing in Canada in 1966, Sabotka took a job as a salesman of ornamental iron railings for $40 a week. He later graduated to a more high paying sales job.

Two months after his arrival, he was approached by the KGB and a meeting was arranged with an official travelling through the west with the Red Army Chorus.

He was told to purchase a short-wave radio receiver and was given a schedule of messages that would start arriving.

The Star says that Sabotka's first assignment was to meet with another spy outside a restaurant in Brockville, Ont. The newspaper says it was during this meeting that Sabotka first came under the surveillance of police — who had been tailing the man with whom he met.

The Star says Sabotka eventually was contacted by RCMP, who had had him under surveillance. He turned over his code book and other equipment to them and answered all questions.

The Star says it first learned of the Sabotka case and published some details of it last March 27. Questions on the story were asked in the House of Commons and Justice Minister Otto Lang said the case was "based on a fictional account which in turn was based partly on fact."

Drop-Outs Spoil Count

David Wilson, Victoria federal returning officer, said today he is "fed up" with the number of signed-up enumerators who have dropped out for what he termed "the phoniest reasons."

Today, enumerators in each of the 264 constituencies across Canada began to collect names to assist in drawing up the voters' lists for the Oct. 30 federal election.

The huge task must be completed by Saturday, Sept. 16.

Wilson said over the weekend he had to make 40 replacements for enumerators who are paid a flat $35 plus 10 cents a name for the week-long job.

"Today, the phone is ringing every 30 seconds with people backing out. Some who signed up last week aren't even turning up to collect their kits," he said.

"Quite a number of those dropouts say they have got a job since we last spoke to them and some are saying they can only work in the evenings," he added.

Enumerators work in pairs as a check of the accuracy and honesty of enumeration. They are chosen by the two parties which finished first and second in the 1968 election.

"Because we had only 150 names submitted to us by David Groos (Liberal MP for Victoria) and Conservative runner-up Eric Charman we've had to rely on non-partisan people to apply," explained Wilson.

In the Victoria riding, 592 enumerators are needed to complete the task.

Several dropouts Sunday were reported today by Mrs. Winnogene Lea, Esquimalt-Saanich returning officer.

"But we're all set today except for one person who had to back out because he's not a Canadian citizen," she said. There are 558 urban and 35 rural enumerators in that riding. Canadian citizenship is required for the enumerating job and those who apply must swear an oath to this effect.

Vancouver riding returning officers too are having their problems with the enumeration.

Humphrey Mostyn, returning officer in Vancouver Centre said he is having "a terrible time dredging up bodies to fill the positions."

He said today he has all 604 jobs but 20 filled, but the dropout rate was high.

Sewer Costs Studied

Sewerage cost estimates for a proposed Sidney-North Saanich low-rent seniors' housing project will be examined by a joint municipal committee next week.

A consulting engineer's report on the system, to be tied in with the Sidney sewer service, is due for delivery Friday, North Saanich Ald. Harry A. Taylor said today.

Consultants for Sidney's sewer project were asked to outline the most economical ways of completing a sewer connection for a Kiwanis Village development on McDonald Park Road in North Saanich, to house 48 retired persons.

Taylor confirmed optimism expressed by some that the project would soon go ahead, even though he said there had been no indication of the report's contents.

"Personally, I'm keen to see it go through," Taylor said.

"But this is not a situation where everyone in North Saanich could be taxed and have no control over it."

He said the users of the system would be the ones to pay for the installation, so the engineering report will have to take into account other prospective users besides the retirement home.

. . . LEWIS

for 30 years, as it has been in the tax laws of "virtually all" industrialized countries.

Lewis called tax deferrments a "corporate community chest with most of the donations coming from the average families. I call this income distribution in reverse — from hardworking people to wealthy corporations."

In particular, he pointed to Dofasco, Stelco and Canadian Marconi as examples of government largesse.

Dofasco, Lewis said, had had an income tax rate between 1966 and 1971 of 14.8 per cent — the same as that of a family with two children under 16 and an annual income of $8,500.

This resulted in the company paying $68.6 million in taxes but it also got $42.4 million in deferred taxes at the same time, he said.

(A Dofasco spokesman said, however, that the company had deferred taxes of $34.4 million during this period and a net profit of $190.6 million. The spokesman noted that Dofasco invested $94 million in the same period in mines, permitting the company to switch from American to Canadian sources of raw materials.

The spokesman said this accounted for Dofasco's "tax break."

Stelco had a 20 per cent tax rate on its net earnings of $748.7 million in the same period and paid $149.8 million in taxes, he said. But, Lewis added, the company had been able to "chalk up" depreciation and depletion allowance totalling $207.7 million in the same period.

Canadian Marconi, also in the same period, had paid $4 million in taxes, but was given $16 million in grants from the government, he said.

In Vancouver, Lewis lunched privately with newly-elected B.C. premier Dave Barrett. At a news conference earlier, he said an NDP government in Ottawa would promote modern ports with the emphasis on movement of grain.

"We think the whole harbor situation should be dealt with and we have plans to improve the ports and update the docking facilities."

10-Cent Threat Led To Teen-Ager's Death

DALLAS (UPI) — Police questioned a 15-year-old youth Monday who was arrested for the fatal stabbing of a high school junior who resisted a 10-cent extortion.

Police said the victim, Timmy Lynn Moore, 16, was confronted at a bowling alley Saturday by a youth who demanded a dime.

"Timmy said he didn't have a dime and the boy told him to pull out his pockets so he could search him," said Robert O'Neal, 16, who was with Moore.

When Timmy refused to empty his pockets, his assailant plunged a knife into his chest.

"I didn't see the knife until he pulled it out of Timmy," O'Neal said. "I thought he hit him with his fist."

Timmy gasped "Help me," then stumbled backward through the doorway of the bowling alley. He died on the way to a hospital.

While police were placing the teen-ager in an ambulance, a crowd gathered and O'Neal pointed to the youth who he said stabbed Timmy.

The teen-age suspect was turned over to juvenile authorities and two other youths were sought for questioning.

Timmy was one of seven children.

bassador-designate Hans-Georg Steltzer was summoned to Arab League headquarters by Egyptian Foreign Minister Hassan El Zayyat and told that Egypt rejected as "unacceptable" West German explanations of statements made following the Munich affair.

German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel was alleged to have said that Germany did not hold the Arab world responsible for the "terrorist" attack. He also was quoted as expressing regrets some Arab states did not issue statements condemning the Munich affair. Bonn clarified these stetements but Egypt rejected the clarification.

Minor border skirmishes were reported in the Middle East Sunday and military sources said Arab guerrillas attacked an Israeli patrol with bazookas and small arms fire near Hebron in the occupied West Bank of Jordan.

Meanwhile, the German government announced that autopsies of the nine slain Israeli hostages showed the Arab terrorists shot all of them as they sat tied and blindfolded in the two helicopters at an air base near Munich.

There had been speculation that the German sharpshooters might have hit some of the hostages while shooting at the Arabs. But the spokesman said the autopsy showed the Arabs apparently killed the hostages moments after the sharpshooters opened fire.

A Swiss newspaper reported that an Israeli evaluation concluded that the Germans made "every conceivable error" in trying to free the hostages.

The Neue Zuercher Zeitung reported from Jerusalem that Israeli security experts faulted the Germans on five points:

—Failure to neutralize the Arabs during their movement with the hostages to a bus in the Olympic Village.

—The crew of the helicopters should have been disguised security officials who might have had a chance to overpower the terrorists.

—Had the hellcopters' tanks contained only enough fuel for the trip from the Olympic village to the air base, one of them might not have caught fire when one of the terrorists set off a grenade.

—The sharpshooters should have waited until all of the terrorists got out of the helicopters before opening fire.

—The airliner standing by for the Arabs should have been used to set another trap for them.

Later Sunday night, PQ leader Rene Levesque mentioned the report in an address to the symposium.

Hearing Opens on Price For Power Line Easement

Higher court hearing into a B.C. Hydro expropriation of an easement through 43 acres of land in Maple Bay area opened before Judge M. T. Drake this morning.

B.C. Hydro has offered $8,741.22 for the easement to construct a power line.

Land owner George Whittaker, a land developer who lives near Duncan, is seeking $70,000 to $80,000 for the easement.

The basement runs through several parcels of land held by Whittaker in the Maple Bay area.

Value of the land is high because much of it is view property, Whittaker said.

Whittaker owns more than 100 acres in the area, which he was holding for future development.

Testimony this morning involved Whittaker's claim for an increased valuation on the land.

Representing Whittaker, Darrall Collins said several sessions would be needed before the case is completed.

The expropriation involves the right to construct a power line on and over the Whittaker property and would not affect ownership of the land on each side of the power line.

Victoria, Edmonton 'Not Twin Cities'

A decision by the Canadian Radio and Television Commission to hold hearings on increased rates by Victoria Cablevision in Edmonton came under fire by a candidate in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Allan McKinnon, Progressive Conservative candidate in Victoria, said during a meeting at Sooke, "The local Member of Parliament should have demanded that the responsible cabinet minister, Gerard Pelletier, see the hearings moved from Edmonton to Victoria.

Victoria Cablevision has applied to the CRTC for an increase in basic subscriber's rate from $4.50 to $5 per month. The hearings were set for Edmonton in October.

Pelletier should point out to his bureaucrats that Edmonton and Victoria are not exactly twin cities and the people who wish to be heard do not travel on government warrants," he said.

Cadet Season Starts

The Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry (Esquimalt) Cadet Corps will hold its first parade of the season Tuesday at the Macauley Point cadet training area.

Boys 13 to 13 who are interested in joining the corps should attend the parade or phone the commanding officer, Capt. R. C. Watt at 479-4617.

At a presentation parade Oct. 17 in the gymnasium at Work Point Barracks, the corps will receive an award as top cadet corps in British Columbia. The corps has placed first four times is the past six years.

At the same parade the corps' rifle team will be presented with the Royal Military College Club of Canada and the Strathcona Trust Rifle trophies.

Sponsored by the 3rd. Battalion, PPCLI, the corps receives training in drill, rifle shooting, bandwork, first aid, radio communication, photography, rappelling, cliff scaling and other subjects.

Weekend exercises at Albert Head and Mary Hill military training camps are part of the year's program.

In the past few years 11 corps members have qualified for Commonwealth shooting matches at Bisley, England.

This summer, cadets attended camps in various provinces. Some visited the Caribbean, Britain and other countries.

LIGHT WAIT

Three Metchosin families learned an enlightening lesson Sunday — if you have a power failure don't just wait it out, tell somebody.

A transformer fuse which blew out about 4 p.m. Sunday cut off the power to three residences.

Each family, assuming that B.C. Hydro had some central switchboard which would monitor the power outage, sat patiently waiting for the electricity to be turned back on. They had a long wait.

B.C. Hydro officials said the failure was not reported until 8 p.m., when one family gave up waiting and took approximately 45 minutes to repair. The spokesman said B.C. Hydro usually learns of power failures through customer complaints.

CUPE Seeks Seat On UVic Senate

Members of the University of Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees are seeking representation on the UVic senate.

Local 951 president Mrs. E. M. Kowalchuk has sent a letter to UVic president Hugh Farquhar asking for a representative on the university body. The request will be discussed at a meeting of the Senate Wednesday.

Mrs. Kowalchuk said union members "have expressed their concern over their lack of involvement in the decision-making areas of the university."

"We do not intend to present ourselves as academicians. We are not.

"But many of us are parents of university students and potential university students and we have more than a passing interest in the content and quality of their education."

It is believed the University of Toronto is the only Canadian university with employee representation on the senate. An attempt by CUPE to get members onto the Senate of the University of British Columbia was not successful.

CUPE Local 951 represents 350 employees in office and laboratory classifications. Another local of the union at the university, representing about 200 workers, has not sought representation on the senate.

CHEMAINUS — The Chemainus Rotary Club hopes to raise $5,000 at its annual auction Sept. 23 at the town's Water Wheel.

Money raised is to be used for various community projects.

The club is also selling tickets for prizes ranging from $25 to $100.

Auction chairman Karl Schutz cited past projects the auction has enabled the club to carry out in the community as caretakers' quarters and change houses at Fuller Lake, benches at the Water Wheel and Kin Park, direction sign at the Trans-Canada Highway.

Schutz is asking residents in the area to donate garden tools, funiture, stoves, fridges, vacuum cleaners, bicycles and other articles.

NEW ICE AGE THREATENS —IN ABOUT 10,000 YEARS

NORWICH, England (AP) — A new Ice Age is creeping over the Northern Hemisphere, and the rest of this century will grow colder and colder, a British expert on climate says.

Prof. Hubert Lamb, director of climate research at the University of East Anglia, had a few comforting thoughts in an interview Sunday:

"The full impact of the new Ice Age will not be upon us for another 10,000 years and even then it will not be as severe as the last great glacial period.

"We are past the best of the inter-glacial period which happened between 7,000 and 3,000 years ago," he continued.

"Ever since then we have been on a downhill float regarding temperature. There may be a few upward fluctuations from time to time but these are more than offset by the general downward trend."

Lamb said temperatures have been slowly dipping for the last 20 years.

"We are on a definite downhill course for the next two centuries," he said. "The last 20 years of this century will be progressively colder.

After that the climate may warm up again but only for a short period of decades."

Lamb said climate changes come in cycles determined by astonomical and physical factors. He said one main cause is the amount of radiation received from the sun.

"We know that the behavior of the sun changes at intervals and these changes have their effect," he said.

"The distance between the earth and the sun also varies through the ages as the earth's orbit increases or decreases its elliptical path.

"The tilting of the earth as it rotates around its own axis also makes the polar ice cap grow, and this affects the air masses around it."

The last great ice age took place about 60,000 years ago and was the sixth in a period of about one million years.

The great ice sheets covered most of the British Isles and North America. The ice was at least 5,000 feet thick.

"It don't think it will be quite as serious this time," Lamb said. "But there will be a lot of glaciers on high ground which do not exist at present."

Lifetime Pensions Await Retiring MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — If he doesn't take a job directly from the federal government, retiring Liberal MP Bud Orange will collect a minimum $4,410 a year in parliamentary pension for the rest of his life.

That means that in three years he gets back all the money he invested in the pension plan, plus some.

Mr. Orange is one of more than 40 members of the Parliament dissolved Sept. 1 who are not seeking re-election. More than 30 of them qualify for lifetime pensions starting now by reason of their last six years in Parliament.

The pension payments are delayed while any otherwise-qualified ex-MP holds a government appointment, including a Senate membership.

Mr. Orange at 46 is one of the younger members quitting Parliament. If he lives to be 70, his pension payout from public funds would amount to a minimum $105,840 on an original investment of $9,450.

That is the minimum because the parliamentary pension is geared to rise with the cost of living. Living costs rise by at least two per cent a year, the pension payments are bumped up by two per cent.

SERVED IN N.W.T.

Mr. Orange, an economist who represented the Northwest Territories in the Commons from 1965, is singled out to illustrate the case of an MP just over the qualifying line to collect a pension — six calendar years of service.

The pension figures cited are based on his having seven years paid up in the fund.

An MP gets a year of paid-up service for every $1350 unit he pays into the program.

For the regular backbencher, $1,350 is the limit he can contribute in a calendar year. But if he has an extra salaried position — such as Parliamentary secretary to a minister, party whip or cabinet minister — he can pay an extra $1,350 units into the plan and thus boost his years of service without regard to how long he actually spent in the House.

Actual age has nothing to do with the plan. It is based strictly on number of paid-up years as an MP has to his credit.

A retiring member becomes ineligible for immediate pension payments if he moves to another position where he is paid out of general government revenues.

BART in Business Five Years Later

OAKLAND, CALIF. (AP) — The first regional rapid-transit system built in the United States in 50 years opens today as transportation experts around the world watch to see if the sleek, high-speed trains can lure an automobile-oriented socley to rails.

Bay Area Rapid Transit District, BART for short, took 15 years to plan, eight years to build and $1.4 billion of tax funds.

It will attempt to do what no other major urban transporation system in the world has done — operate without a deficit through labor-saving automation.

The opening is five years later than originally promised due to BART's history of time-consuming costly delays.

The 75-mile electrified rail system, which includes a 3.6-mile tubular tunnel under San Francisco Bay, will connect San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond with six outslying suburban cities.

OPEN 28 MILES

Ceremonies today mark the opening of a 28-mile link from Oakland to Fremont, with eight aerodynamic cars speeding between 12 stations.

The rest of the computer-operated system is scheduled to open in stages through next summer.

Centred in Oakland, BART radiates in four directions with elevated, surface and underground tracks. Passengers entering one of 34 stations will be greeted by murals and will buy magnetically coded tickets from electronic turnstiles.

They will ride in air-conditioned trains designed to reach a top speed of 80 miles an hour and to average 45 m.p.h. A computer at headquarters here can adjust speeds automatically if the trains get off schedule. Attendants riding up front will be needed only in the event of emergency.

The system is designed to carry as many as 28,800 persons an hour — equivalent to the volume of rush-hour traffic on 10 lanes of freeway. Planners hope it will provide an alternative to city traffic tie-ups and automobile commuting.

Rides will cost from 30 cents for a short trip to a maximum of $1.25. Passengers more than 65 and less than 12 years of age will ride for 75 per cent off.

World Group Ponders Environment

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — World scientists and other specialists today began a global census of environmental problems at the opening session of a conservation convention attended by representatives from about 80 countries.

The triennial meeting of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources will sift through 25 technical papers during the week. Topics discussed will include national and international environmental policies, conservation of marine habitats and environmental quality in a changing world.

The union operates through an international executive board and six commissions made up of union members. Each commission specializes in a different aspect of the union's work.

The survival service commission, of which Ian McTaggart Cowan of Canada is a member, watches the world's population of rare and vanishing creatures and makes recommendations to the IUCN on what to do about it."

Dr. McTaggart Cowan, dean of graduate studies at the University of British Columbia, said "there is a heartening change in world morality towards the creatures with which we share the world."

"People no longer look on other creatures that share this world as things they can do with as they wish."

Dr. McTaggart Cowan, one of five IUCN vice-presidents, and an ecologist, said in an interview the organization's commissions "do a great deal of the spade work."

"They involve several hundred people throughout the world who act as our eyes and ears on problems of environment and of organisms.

"As soon as we identify the problem, we can start negotiating. We can go to the government of the country involved."

Killers Sought In Bush

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V.I. (AP) — Five men charged with murdering eight persons during a robbery at the posh Fountain Valley Golf Course still are on the run as police keep a heavy guard on two others jailed in the killings.

Bench warrants for the five fugitives were issued late Sunday.

Gov. Melvin H. Evans identified the five.

"The men being sought are armed and should be considered dangerous," said a statement by Evans.

Two others charged in the slayings have been jailed on the neighboring island of St. Thomas, where they were taken following their arrests Saturday night.

Small squads of FBI sharpshooters, Virgin Islands police and U.S. marshals continued chopping through tangled trees and surrounding the club in an effort to flush out the five believed still in a 15-square-mile area surrounding the course.

Now a New Deal for Parks?

A lengthy study conducted by the Victoria Sierra Club confirms with facts and figures what has long been evident to persons interested in the parklands of this province. In brief, the record shows that the Social Credit government, while making a brave show of establishing small parks for tourist camping near main highways, sadly neglected the creation of new wilderness parklands of sizable acreage.

Added to the low priority given to preservation of large parklands by the government is the dismal fact that no parklands of more than 18,600 acres were created over a twenty-year period without decreasing existing parkland by much larger acreages. And where land was not traded off from one park to establish another, the essential asset of timber growth was occasioally bargained away.

Still clear in the public's mind, as an example, is the boasted bargain which the Social Credit government won for British Columbia when it gained ownership of various parcels of land at the northern tip of Vancouver Island for future creation of a park. The land was estimated to be worth $300,000. But to "buy" it for the people of B.C. the government traded off $10 million worth of timber in Strathcona Park. The acquisition of Rathtrevor Beach camping park, near Parksville, was accomplished only at the expense of a large tract of timber rights in another existing park.

A spokesman for the Sierra Club puts it: "The more the past government's policy is examined, the more it appears to be designed to confine people to small wayside parks and to gradually whittle away at the larger parks, especially the wilderness areas."

The year the excellent Bowron Lakes park of 287,000 acres was set aside, we lost 2,400,000 acres out of Hamber Park. Stone Mountain Park, of 64,000 acres, and Muncho Lake Park, of about 218,000 acres, were gained at the cost of wiping out the 1,500,000-acre Liard River Park.

The Social Credit government, anxious to secure the greatest degree of industrial development in the shortest time, never quite came to the realization that extensive wilderness areas, preserved in their natural state, have also become invaluable assets as outdoor museums of what the country used to look like, and as actively used areas for recreation.

Both of these objectives are becoming more and more necessary but more and more difficult to achieve as logging continues, land increases in price, and the pressure of public use — enormously increased by the development of mobile camping equipment of all kinds — begins to crowd and "wear out" the most accessible areas.

The new government of Premier Barrett has still to indicate its intentions in regard to the creation of new parks and preservation of those now in existence. But parks enthusiasts and other environmentalists are hopeful that a new, enlightened approach will become evident, and that new parklands will be added to the list of sizable wilderness areas without the loss of existing park properties or the timber and other natural endowments which are their main attraction.

Madison Ave., Puerto Rico

The current gubernatorial election campaign in Puerto Rico might not have attracted as many policital "consultants" as it has but for one thing — money. To prevent any one party from getting the edge, the commonwealth government subsidizes each major party to the tune of $375,000 apiece and this, when added to heavy private contributions, means the candidates can, in the Wall Street Journal's phrase, "run fairly lavish races."

Innumerable flacks are reported to be jetting to and from the Spanish-speaking island writing memos, sitting at pool side, or playing tennis. Some flew straight from the Republican Convention at Miami Beach.

With the future relationship of Puerto Rico to the U.S. being debated, interest has been stirred in the prospect of statehood. Public relations men have concocted a television spot which is deftly undercutting the incumbent: he is portrayed as "The Masked Statehooder," in imitation of the Lone Ranger.

Like an overly slick ad, the high-pressure campaign in the Caribbean island is outwardly entertaining and charming but inwardly insulting and corrupting. As a portrayal of what political life could be like in a PR man's paradise the present campaign in San Juan is worth watching. And worth avoiding.

Seen in the Mirror

The delicate issue of the mental health of the world's leading politicians has arisen with the (London) Sunday Mirror's front page comment on President Idi Amin of Uganda. It says, in bold black type: "He's Nuts."

There is scarcely a leader anywhere whom opponents do not, in particularly frustrating moments, brand as unbalanced. But can objective political insanity ever be defined and, if so, can anything be done about it?

An understanding among the world's people that certain behavior and statements would be regarded as abnormal and subject to censure would mean, at the least, that we had established a common system of values and were on the way to a world of common law and co-operation. That day is still distant. Until then we will probably have to be satisfied with acceptable rules in what is still a struggle for national and regional survival.

But the world is too small and too dangerous to rest content with gentlemanly rules condemning only overt injustice. We should begin to work towards a definition of censurable behavior, including conduct which up to now has been considered purely demestic.

". . . sometimes I get this feeling that everybody is a hostage . . ."

Make Way for Mr. Speaker

OTTAWA — Of the 264 constituencies into which the country is divided, one is a seat unlike the others. This is Stormont-Dundas, fronting on the St. Lawrence and centering on the city of Cornwall.

Elsewhere the question of primary public interest on October will be: Who wins what? Stormont-Dundas will be different because more is at stake there than the fortunes of one party or another. In the last Parliament it was represented by Lucien Lamoureux, first continuing Speaker of the House of Commons, and on the outcome in Stormont may well depend the future of a brave, but still uncertain, experiment.

The situation at the moment is somewhat unclear. Mr. Lamoureux will stand again as an independent. An official Conservative candidate has been in the field for some time. The NDP have been expected to enter but may be having second thoughts. The Liberals will not nominate, a sound decision even though it has been publicly supported with some odd reasons, including the announced discovery that Mr. Lamoureux is "unbeatable."

Impartiality

In their professions, all the parties are for a continuing, independent Speakership. We have already seen its benefits. The impartiality of Mr. Lamoureux was never questioned. He presided over the House of Commons with an authority owing a good deal to his personal qualities but primarily to his independence in fact as well as in theory.

Why then should he be confronted with officially sponsored opponents? Why, in partciular, should the Conservatives reverse course when they gained so much credit in 1968 by standing aside?

The political temptation is plain enough. Cornwall has suffered a good deal from unemployment and may thus appear to party managers an inviting target. But what is the case for intervention and what is it worth? A case has in fact been made but it is not worth much.

It was the pipeline debacle which convinced many people of the need for a continuing, independent Speaker. One of those so persuaded was a former Conservative member, briefly a minister, Frank McGee. To avoid the sort of difficulty which has now arisen, he proposed an ingenious scheme which would require no party to sacrifice anything for the common gain. The future continuing Speaker would represent an artificial constituency, "Parliament Hill."

The government has taken no initiative calculated to implement this particular scheme or anything like it. By this omission, the argument runs, other parties have been freed of responsibility. As the experiment, although highly successful, was not carried to completion, not safeguarded by institutional arrangements, they are within their rights in wrecking it.

SPEAKER LAMOUREUX
. . . should not be opposed

This may strike many people as a shabby argument. It requires a mantle of apparent respectability and has been given one. The pretence is that a constituency represented by Mr. Speaker is not represented. Intervention is presented as the means of rescuing the poor, disfranchised citizens of Stormont-Dundas.

Such presentations are commonly described as sucker-bait. There is nothing respectable about them. The inference is that Mr. Lamoureux cannot make appropriate representations on behalf of his people — or, if he does, will not be heard — because he cannot attend caucus, pull wires, or please ministers by making partisan speeches.

What blithering nonsense! An independent speaker is the most influential member of the entire House. Any government which chose to ignore him would be out of its mind.

Even among partisans, access to caucus is not everything. No one torments ministers more than the arch-oppositionist, John Diefenbaker. But if they are wise, they accord him discriminating attention (often he enjoys more attention than government private members) because of his great experience in and out of government and the well known fact that many resort to him as a former Prime Minister.

Non-Partisan

Mr. Lamoureux is not a partisan. But he is the servant of the whole House and it is thus the plain duty of the House to defend him. No one could occupy a stronger position. To pretend otherwise is to insult the intelligence of voters.

Mr. McGee's approach, whatever its merits, is not the only one; nor is it the one taken in Britain which pioneered in this respect. They began as we did in 1968. Their system does not require that Mr. Speaker be unopposed. But there is a strong convention that candidates standing against Mr. Speaker should not be endorsed by political parties, with their great organizations and massive resources.

It would be absurd to suppose that this convention took root because of the superior morality of British political parties. The credit belongs to British voters, who are jealous of their institutions and who recognize that irresponsible parties must occasionally be brought to heel.

Their method deserves attention here, especially — unless the situation changes — in Stormont-Dundas. When British candidates opposing Mr. Speaker attempt to array themselves in national party colors, they are merely treated by voters in that particular constituency as the representatives of splinter groups, bound for nowhere.

It is a remarkably uncomplicated method and the results have been admirable. For proof of this, see any speech on the workings of the British Parliament by leading Canadian thinkers of the deceased House — especially those by Conservatives.

To Break the Mideast Logjam

UNITED NATIONS, NEW YORK — The tragedy of the eleven Olympic athletes in Munich reminded the world once again how deep passions run in the Arab-Israel quarrel and how dangerous it is to neglect the Mideast problem.

In the wake of Egypt's break with the Soviet Union, there was a temptation to shove Mideast peacemaking onto a back burner.

The Arabs were weaker, relative to Israel, than they had been since the end of the 1967 war, perhaps since 1948. With no likelihood of an early resumption of fighting, Israel seemed under little or no pressure to compromise.

Since Israel's basic demand — that the Arabs agree to redraw the map of the Middle East — continued to be unacceptable to the Arabs, there was no sign of a break in the deadlock. But the situation was considered tolerable because it seemed stable and relatively pacific.

Shattering

Suddenly, however, the logjam became very shattering indeed. No doubt this was one major purpose of the Arab terrorists' action.

The guerrillas were prepared to pay, and did pay, a huge price for what they wanted. The intense and virtually worldwide wave of sympathy for Israel which they provoked was entirely predictable.

So, just as the Jewish Defence League (JDL) and the Provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army are willing to absorb widespread condemnation in order to further what they regard as higher goals, the Palestinians must have consciously risked global criticism in order to dramatize the "cause" they have so cruelly distorted.

It will not be enough for the world to be indignant, though indignation is obviously justified. This kind of outrage cannot be deterred by angry words, or by physical reprisals of the kind which, for example, the JDL has urged.

It can only be ended, in the last analysis, by removing the conditions which produce the terrorism, and which feed the recruitment pipeline. The handle which extremists use to win converts must be taken from them.

Most of the Palestiniam terrorists are spawned in Arab refugee camps of Gaza and the Jordan Valley. These camps, with more than a million people, are sinkholes of some of the world's most intense misery.

A full generation of young people, and more, has grown up in surroundings which fan hatred and desire for revenge. Add Communist incitement, and the miracle is not that there are so many Arab terrorists, but that there are so few.

Where Fires Burn

Rightly or wrongly, these refugees are consumed by a sense of injustice. They live for one thing: the right to return to their former homes in what is now Israel.

Israel has offered to negotiate a refugee settlement independently of other Arab-Israel issues. But there is no sign that Tel Aviv would agree to give more than a small percentage of the refugees a free choice of returning home.

Israel fears, no doubt with reason, that some would attempt to organize a fifth column. She also wants to maintain the present population balance in Israel, lest the state lose its Jewish character.

But there will be no peace, and no conditions in which to negotiate one, until a solution is found.

Israel has shown herself fully capable of maintaining order in Arab communities; she knows how to deal with a potential fifth column, even when the numbers are large. The occupied territories have been relatively quiet since 1967, with no Munichs there. And much of the motive for conflict and terror would be removed in an atmosphere of repatriation and reconciliation.

Repeated studies of the refugee problem by some of the world's best qualified and most objective people have agreed on one thing: that if the refugees were given a free choice of repatriation or generous compensation for lost property, only a small proportion of the homeless would in fact exercise the option to return, and then stay in Israel once they discovered how things had changed.

Act of Courage

It would take an act of great political courage for Israel to test this thesis; but to do so would open the way to a final, comprehensive peace settlement as no other single move could do.

Israel is strong enough, now, to take the step. As rarely before, her security is assured.

She has what she regards as defensible borders, and the Soviet air force no longer confronts her across the Suez Canal. Her principal adversary, Egypt, no longer has an open weapons pipeline to Moscow.

To seem to concede anything to Palestinians at this moment, when the step could be portrayed as "rewarding terrorism," no doubt is impossible. But once the dust of Munich has settled, a dramatic offer of repatriation or compensation to all refugees, the choice to be exercised over a period of time, could cut through the diplomatic logjam and produce a wholly new psychological and political atmosphere in the area.

It might also help to avoid new and senseless tragedies like the one that occurred in Munich this past week.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

For the Birds

(My answer to the letter entitled "Caw" which appeared in the Times, Tuesday, September 5.)

Did it ever occur to you, Mr. Sowerby, that maybe the crow considers us a pest and a nuisance?

We cause obnoxious noises from our vehicles very often underneath their nests where baby and adult crow alike must inhale lethal fumes and put up with the horrifying sounds emitting from cars, trucks, and motorcycles, many without mufflers.

I personally enjoy the dynamic talk of my fine feathered friends and say we owe an apolgy to this magnificent bird.

By the way, if you want to talk about crows killing the odd song bird then just how many song birds has man exterminated in the world by the use of pesticides? — Sylvia Lepmanis, 639 Battery St.

The Gorge

I recently had the pleasure of visiting your beautiful city of Victoria. Beacon Hill Park with all of the lovely rose gardens, the sunken gardens, so many beautiful spots to see. I stopped with some friends of mine at a place called the Gorge.

We went into a park and walked down to the water's edge. I was getting ready to take some pictures when I saw garbage floating in the Gorge, plus human waste. I'm to gather that the homes around the Gorge use this beauty spot for garbage disposal. I'm to understand that this was an ideal spot to bathe at one time. Now that it is polluted, forget it. Give this spot about ten years, it will just be another stink hole. Such a terrible shame to see this take place. We have a battle going on here in California, to save our natural beauty spots that the people have taken to destroy.

By invoking tough laws on pollution I implore the people of Victoria to do something about this before it is too late. — S. M. Lipscombe, P.O. Box 388, Baker, Cal. 92309.

Triple Nationality

Now there will be a new tenant in the legislative buildings, hopefully with considerably more enthusiasm for our own national identity than the former tenant.

This, of course, includes our provincial title as well as Mr. Bennett's 1906 colony flag (a colony we are not) and definitely less with the second title word Columbia. My Webster dictionary tells me that Columbia means the United States.

This leaves us as a half each of two nations — a misnomer in its worst form.

How much longer are we to live in a world of fantasy? Doing so is just plain ridiculous and shamefully belittling.

To engender respect from others we must in some measure have respect for ourselves.

Hanging on to something for the sake of medieval history is again beyond reasoning.

One cannot bring back the past for corrective measures, but we can and must look now for a corrective reality — the sooner the better.

Surely we have the character to come out from under a triple personality and a triple nationality. This leaves a great deal to be desired in any language. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Rd.

—From the Times of Sept. 11, 1912:

Considerable local interest has been evinced in the classic St. Leger race which was run at Doncaster, England, this afternoon. This was largely on account of the fact that at least three prominent tobacconists have organized sweepstakes in connection with the event. Chief of these was Salmon's Grand St. Leger Sweep, the result of which was made known about noon today.

Coddled Corporations and the Tax Rip-Off

Big Firms Not Paying Share And Subsidized, Says NDP Chief

By DAVID LEWIS

(This article was excerpted by The Globe and Mail from a speech by the national NDP leader to Toronto area candidates for his party.)

Taxation is one of the major instruments for redistributing income; it is perhaps the clearest guide to the direction of government policy.

Taxation is also of immediate and direct concern to the wage and salary earners whose taxes are deducted at the source, who have no loopholes through which they can escape their tax obligation.

If the corporations and the wealthy do not pay their fair share, then the wage and salary earner is forced to carry an unfair tax burden. And this is precisely what has been happening in Canada for years and has happened at an accelerated rate under the Trudeau government.

Siphon Millions

I want to document this statement . . . and I intend to do so time and time again between now and election day. I believe that this subject is one of the major issues facing Canadians today. It illustrates clearly the power of the corporations and the extent to which Liberal and Conservative governments are their servants at the expense of the Canadian people.

We are witnesses in Canada to the growth of a new kind of welfare rip-off . . . corporations that siphon hundreds of millions of dollars each year from the public trough while they pay a declining share of the income tax needed to finance government services.

Thus, under the latest budget, only 15 per cent of Government revenues on a budgetary basis will come from corporations, while 15 per cent of federal spending will go to so-called "economic development and support" . . . that is to say, to grants and handouts for the corporations.

Figure it out: 15 per cent from the corporations minus 15 per cent for the corporations equals zero as the net contribution of the corporations to the social programs of the federal government.

A secret government memorandum leaked just last month lends new weight to our charge that regional economic expansion grants are being abused by some outfits like Michelin Tire, which has admitted that its choice of Nova Scotia as the location of its Canadian plant was not influenced by $16-million in grants from the federal treasury, not to mention grants and guarantees from the government of Nova Scotia.

The NDP does not object to Michelin's decision to locate in a slowgrowth area like Nova Scotia. Indeed, we welcome the fact that 1,000 or so new jobs became available there. But we do object to $16-million in public funds being thrown away if Michelin would have gone there anyway. This was merely a windfall handout to a powerful multi-national corporation which clearly did not need it.

The leaked memo, written by J. H. Lynn, a senior policy analyst with the Treasury Board, says a study by Dr. David Springate at the Harvard School of Business contains "evidence which verifies some of the worst fears of observers of the RDIA . . . Regional Development Incentives Act . . . program."

But RDIA is only one strand in a vast web of subsidies and concessions spun over the years by governments to lessen the risk in business and sweeten the profits.

Listen to the alphabet soup of names that some of these programs go by in the bureaucratic jungle—DIR, GAAP, IRDIA, PAIT, RDIA, PIDA, ADA, even IRA (that's Industrial Research Assistance, I should add, not the Irish Republican Army).

In addition there are shipbuilding assistance grants, motor vehicle manufacturers' remissions, machinery remissions, tax remissions, and so on.

What I want to emphasize is that we are not dealing with one or two temporary programs. What Conservative and Liberal governments have built up is a vast network of corporate welfare, costing hundreds of millions each year. What we have is income distribution in reverse: from the working people to the corporations.

Dodges Mastered

Let me cite three concrete examples which every Canadian should know. Between 1966 and 1971, Davie Shipbuilding Ltd., a subsidiary of Canada Steamship Lines, received an RDIA grant of $127,408, an allotment from DIP of $226,331, and no fewer than 21 shipbuilder's grants totalling $26,752,399. This loot adds up to more than $27-million. We cannot document tax figures for Davie because it is a subsidiary company, but I do know that during those same years its parent, Canada Steamship, paid less than $25 million in income tax. This represents a net loss of $2-million to the public purse while Canada Steamship walked away with profits of more than $50-million in that period.

Then there are those companies that can do without the handouts because they have mastered all the tax dodges. I am thinking of companies like Denison Mines, the company of Stephen Roman, Tory candidate for York North. "I believe in the incentive society," Mr. Roman declared recently. No wonder: he certainly received incentives. Denison Mines paid not a cent of income taxes from 1961 to 1970, despite stated profits of $63,538,288 from 1965 to 1970 and Lord knows how many millions in the four years before that.

Finally . . . some facts concerning such a penurious multinational subsidiary as Shell Canada. From 1964 to 1969 it took in net earnings of $516,5557.000 — more than half a billion dollars. But during that time it paid not one cent of income tax, thanks to a vast network of tax concessions, depletion allowances and other dodges.

They finally got around to paying some taxes in 1970, mind you. They paid $16-million on net earning of $123-million—a rate of 13 per cent. That is about half the rate paid by most people earning no more than $9,000 or $10,000 a year. But then most people in that bracket don't have tax accountants—just bills

If these facts are not striking enough, we find that Shell also learned to milk the government for money. From 1965 to 1971 Shell got five shipowners' grants totalling $1,502,940 and 12 customs and excise remissions totalling $2,566,535. In short, out of the measly $16-million it paid in taxes on net earnings of about $640-million over a period of seven years, it got back a total of more than $4-million in handouts.

These are only a few of dozens of cases we have documented so far. I will be talking about them a good deal in the weeks ahead to show that Canada can afford to do more for its people without loading new tax increases on low-and middle-income taxpayers.

The $27-million lavished on Davie Shipbuilding, the $4-million on Shell, another $4-million on Westinghouse, $8.5-million an Alcan—there are many, many more I could cite, totalling hundreds of million of dollars a year, in addition to the tax break the corporations get—all this money would have been better spent reducing the tax burden on ordinary Canadians or providing better services for pensioners and others.

The philosophy behind these give-aways, according to the May 8 budget speech of the Minister of Finance (John Turner), is "to buttress the Canadian economy—to provide incentives for Canadian industry to grow and compete and provide jobs."

Let's dissect that one bit before we go any further. During the four Trudeau years, Government grants to corporations increased from $391-million to $530-million per year, or 35.2 per cent, not even including such extra sweeteners as tax remissions, concessions and cuts, manpower training, accelerated depreciations, or depletion allowances. But during the same Trudeau years, average unemployment increased from 4.8 per cent in 1968 to 6.4 per cent in 1971, or by 33⅓ per cent.

Show Gratitude

This is revealing. The rise in grants corresponds to the rise in unemployment down. The Finance Minister's faith in industrial incentives is sadly misplaced in view of the record. But his corporate friends are showing their gratitude in campaign funds.

There may indeed be some relationship that the minister does not wish to notice. As the taxes of the ordinary family go up to pay for all this corporate welfare and compensate for the decreasing share of corporation tax, the family has less money to buy goods. Manufacturers produce less and workers are laid off. What to do? According to the Finance Minister, give more incentives to industry, more tax concessions, more money from the pockets of the ordinary family which will then have less money to spend on goods. So round and round we go until the business cycle begins to move upward.

DAVID LEWIS . . . 'One of the major issues'

Just what has happened to the individual taxpayer over the past several years? In 1951, on a national accounts basis corporations paid 28 per cent of all direct taxes collected by the federal government and individuals paid 26.7 per cent; a fairly equitable sharing of the tax burden. In 1973 individuals will pay 49.9 per cent of all income tax and corporations only 12.2 per cent. At one time the proportions were equal; now individuals contribute four times as much as corporations.

An enormous number of corporations are getting a free ride on the free enterprise merry-go-round. Statistics Canada reported that in 1969, 92,705 corporations, nearly half the companies in this country (46.4 per cent) paid no taxes at all. I appreciate that a number of them were small or made no profits.

But many, like Shell, slipped through the loopholes and concessions provided by their allies in government. The ordinary taxpayer paid for their ticket as well as his own. He will pay even more next year when his taxes go up by 3 per cent while the taxes of many companies go down in accordance with Mr. Turner's budget.

Some more striking examples are relevant to fill out the picture. Since 1962 the profits of mineral fuel companies in Canada have increased 477 per cent. But in 1969, 81.6 per cent of oil and gas producing companies paid no taxes at all.

Since 1947, corporate profits have increased by nearly 500 per cent while personal income per capita has risen by just a little over 300 per cent. Why then does the government not put the tax bite on those who can best afford it? The Canadian people deserve an answer to this question.

John Munro, the Minister of National Health and Welfare, rationalized this for us during his speech in Quebec . . . He says it isn't a good idea to tax the rich too heavily because it would ruin their incentive to get rich. Quite obviously the only incentive the average guy needs to keep him at the workbench eight hours a day is the rent due on the first of the month with the dentist's bill not far behind.

In short, what we see is a close and profitable alliance between government and big business. Government ensures profits of the corporations and the corporations grubstake the free enterprise parties at election time. According to the Ontario chairman of the Liberals' Red Carnation Fund, his party has depended for years on the support of just 95 corporations. Government and big business hold hands—in your pocket

It is this relationship which is at the root of many of our problems. Nowhere was it more clearly illustrated than by the so-called reform of the income tax structure recently. When the Royal Commission on Taxation brought in its recommendations some years ago, we applauded its observations on the growing inequalities in our society that are aggravated by our system of taxation.

"Federal tax administration is not sufficiently shielded from political influence," the commission concluded. And, as one would expect, it was this very influence that torpedoed our hopes of seeing real tax reform flow from the recommendations.

Individuals Too

Under our new tax laws, one continues to be taxed not according to how much he earns, but how he earns it. A man or woman working in a factory or office pays taxes on the full amount of taxable income. But someone who gets the same amount of income entirely from capital gains pays taxes on only half the taxable income.

And someone who earns the same amount of income from dividends of Canadian corporations pays no taxes on it at all.

Not only corporations have been able to escape their share of the tax load. Wealthy individuals have not only the advantages I have just mentioned but tax loopholes they can exploit.

Thus in 1970 the average income of self-employed doctors and surgeons was $35,000. One hundred and fifty-seven doctors paid no taxes at all. Doctors were able to deduct $1.5-million as losses on hobby farms, $13.5 -million as losses on rental property, and $2.5-million in depletion allowances. In addition, the tax bill of the medical profession was reduced $1.7-million by the dividend tax credit.

I must, in fairness, emphasize that only a small proportion of the approximately 20,000 doctors in Canada took advantage of tax loopholes. But it is, nonetheless, an instructive example. I should also make clear that some of the loopholes were closed in recent tax legislation, but many still remain and I should be surprised, indeed astounded, if tax accountants and lawyers fail to find new ones.

The government . . . must provide an enormous range of costly government services. Someone has to pay for them.

Every tax dollar that isn't collected from those who can afford it is collected from those who cannot afford it. The working man cannot afford to subsidize the profits of corporations and carry the tax burden that the rich have evaded. This is not the path to justice and prosperity for Canadians.

The government whines that it cannot give realistic pensions, build more homes, raise wages of federal employees in areas like the Maritimes and provide better medical services because the money for these things must come out of someone's pocket.

Well let me recommend a few pockets, starting with an equitable rate of taxation on corporate profits, and especially the closing of loopholes that allow companies to avoid their responsibilities altogether. The federal government could easily shift $2-billion from the corporations and from the better-off segments of society to those Canadians who feel the weight of taxation most heavily.

It could begin by withdrawing the 7 per cent tax cut given to the corporations in last October's budget and the further $500-million in concessions provided in the May budget. That would yield $675-million, enough to lop $100 off the bill of low-and middle-income Canadian families. For many families, $100 is not peanuts.

Plug Loopholes

It should get the rest by increasing the effective tax rate on corporate profits, taxing capital gains fully, plugging the tax loopholes for both corporations and individuals, and wiping out wasteful giveaways to corporations.

With these funds, the government could cut the taxes of Canadians earning less than $10,000 or $12,000 very substantially, producing a tax system that treated Canadians more fairly. It would also be injecting about $2-billion directly into the economy, creating demand that would bring about more employment and a more prosperous, more self-reliant Canada.

Checked by His Mate

By HANK BURCHARD

"Bobby Fischer is a jerk," she said.

"Bobby Fischer is the greatest living chess player and maybe the greatest of all time," I said. "Ordinary standards of conduct do not apply."

"I don't care how good he is, they shouldn't put up with his childish tantrums. I hope Spassky destroys him."

"He's just psyching Spassky. He psychs everybody. Fischer has his games half won when he sits down, because it's like sitting across from a bomb. His opponents are thinking about Fischer, and Fischer's thinking about the game."

"It isn't fair. If he can't play the game like a human being he should be barred from competition."

"They can't throw him out. He's the best."

That was the table talk around our house during the weeks and months of preliminary skirmishing in the world chess championship at Reykjavik. I always got the last words, which were: "If you knew the game, you'd realize how fantastic a player Fischer is. Everything else is irrelevant."

★ ★ ★

After 12 years of marriage I should have known better than to talk like that.

"Teach me how to play chess," she said.

For the next week it was Ruy Lopez and Bishop's Opening and Philodor's Defence and Queen's Pawn Gambit Declined from after dinner until bed time.

The first games were runaways for me, until she became schooled in the devious ways of the knight, my favorite piece. She did not ask, and would not accept, quarter.

I wasn't defending just myself but Fischer also. He has been my champion since the days when he and I were nasty, introverted teenagers. He struck a blow for icky boys everywhere the day he strolled into the New York Chess Club and announced, in his insufferably snotty way, that he was the best chess player in the world and then proved it.

★ ★ ★

He was magnificent and he made a chess player out of me. Not a good player but a constant one, until the diversion grew into an obsession and I forced myself to give it up. And anyway Tommy Berdeen, the kid I grew up with who always was better at everything but stealing, was beating me 100 games to 1, sometimes even when playing without his queen.

But the Fischer-Spassky match revived it all. I cheered his every boorish ploy, serene in the belief that each new outrage was part of a coolly calculated plan to increase the gate, his book sales, the purse, his fame and, especially, his cruel dominance of the gentle, likeable Spassky, that model for good guys.

The match in Iceland went as I had expected, with Fischer inexorably grinding Spassky down. The match at home, however, was growing tense. Her bad moves became fewer and her good moves better. She was beginning to make me sweat the way Tommy did. I began to play full strength and the victories became narrower every day. I started buying chess books, but she reads faster.

And then there did come a game when, playing white, I found myself terribly pressed by her sound opening against my dramatic but sloppy one. My knights were paired ineffectually to one side, my bishops blocked in a corner, my queen exposed in the centre.

I studied the board, and a plan formed. It involved an elegant combination of queen sacrifice, successive discovered checks and, finally, pawn promotion to checkmate.

She, meanwhile, was failing to exploit her magnificently developed pieces and was fooling around building a pawn attack.

The time came to strike. I moved a pawn, casually, exposing my twice-defended queen to a triple attack. She made another redundant pawn move. I advanced my pawn again, setting up an unstoppable pawn fork on the eighth rank with discovered check. It was going to be check, check, check, mate.

She studied the board, her eyes travelling along the converging lines of my attack. There was one delaying move possible, but it involved a queen sacrifice that would have left her irretrievably outmanned.

★ ★ ★

She touched her queen, thoughtfully. "That may buy you some time, but it will cost you the game anyway" (I was about to say), when she said:

"Check," moving her queen all the way across the board to the diagonal next to my king, with her queen protected by that stupid pawn she had been fooling with.

"And mate," she said. "I still say Bobby Fischer is a jerk."

ETHNIC VOTE MAY SWING CONSERVATIVE

By JOHN BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — "The Croat vote goes to Stanfield."

The remark was tossed out for the benefit of reporters by a talkative Yugoslav emigre demonstrator when President Tito visited Parliament Hill last fall. It sounded innocuous enough.

In an indirect way, however, it may have said a lot about a little-discussed area of government policy that could turn out to have an important bearing on the Oct. 30 federal election: foreign affairs.

The demonstrator's remark, spoken long before an election date became known, indicated what one anti-Tito Croatian nationalist thought of Prime Minister Trudea's so-called "Ostpolitik."

But it might also be taken to represent what some opposition candidates see as widespread disenchantment among emigre groups, particularly East Europeans, with the present government's foreign policy.

This, it is said, could spell trouble for the Liberals in certain urban constituencies where the ethnic vote, long considered solidly Liberal, is heavy. And the final effect could be of some account in a close-run election.

DENY DISCONTENT

Liberal spokesmen deny that there is any deep discontent.

In addition to "Ostpolitik" — Trudeau's policy of forging closer ties between Canada and Communist East Europe, including the Soviet Union — major foreign initiatives in the last four years have included a 50 per cent cut in the size of Canada's NATO contribution in Europe.

Recognition of the Chinese People's Republic could be a factor in ridings where there is a heavy Chinese vote, but how it will affect the campaign is unclear.

A riding where some of these issues may attract more attention than in others is Toronto Parkdale, which has an ethnic vote representing 48 per cent of the total. Some other Toronto ridings have an even higher ethnic percentage.

Among a diverse mixture of racial elements in Parkdale, Polish and Ukrainian groups are prominent. The candidates of both the major parties, Stanley Haidasz for the Liberals and Lubor Zink for the Conservatives, are of ethnic origin themselves.

Haidasz, who represented the riding in the last Parliament, was born in Toronto of Polish parents. Zink, a newspaper columnist, was born in Czechoslovakia.

READ OUT

The NDP, which ran second to the Liberals in 1968, originally nominated Waffle leader Mel Watkins but when the Waffle was read out of the party it became necessary to name a new standard bearer.

This has not yet been done.

Zink claims to have detected a "strong feeling," in his door-to-door canvassing, against Trudeau's NATO policy and his efforts to open up a new era of friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

Greenland Makes Costly Exit From Dark Ages

By GEORGE BOULTWOOD

GODTHAAB, Greenland (AP) — You'll have to give up that old joke about the smart salesman who sold a refrigerator to an Eskimo.

In Greenland some Eskimos have refrigerators as well as washing machines, garbage disposal, a supermarket around the corner.

All were provided in low-rental apartment blocks built by the Danish government.

The Danish taxpayers have been spending $100 million a year since 1970 to push Greenland's 41,000 descendants of the Eskimos out of the Stone Age. And little Denmark, with only five million people, plans to pay out that amount every year until 1985.

The government's intention is that the Greenlanders will have a standard of living comparable to that of their fellow citizens in Denmark.

This is a formidable undertaking because Greenland is one of the most daunting areas ever inhabited.

Man first came to Greenland about 4,000 years ago. Its Scandinavian links go back 1,000 years to the landing of the Norsemen led by Erik the Red on the southern tip. Erik gave it the misleading name in the hope of attracting other settlers.

MOSTLY UNDER ICE

Greenland is the world's largest island. Its 840,000 square miles make it more than twice the size of Ontario. All except one-sixth of the area is permanently under an icecap nearly two miles thick. Danes like to frighten visitors with the calculation that if the ice melted the oceans would rise 24 feet.

Only the 2,400 miles of coastal fringe is habitable. Even there human existence can be precarious with temperatures as low as 94 degrees below zero in the north and wild gales in the south during the six months of winter.

Until 1953 Greenland was virtually closed to the outside world, to protect the Eskimo culture. Then it was proclaimed an integral part of the Kindgom of Denmark.

Policies had to change when it became obvious Greenlanders could no longer exist in the traditional way as hunters of seal, walrus, polar bear and Arctic birds from sealskin kayaks.

One in three Greenlanders died of tuberculosis and the life expectation was 32 years. Tuberculosis now has been conquered.

A successful health program brought about a population explosion.

CHANGES MADE

In 1921 the population was 21,000. Now it is 48,000, including about 7,000 people from Denmark.

An enormous modernization program was needed to provide work and housing. The fishing fleet was expanded, modern apartment blocks constructed in the west coast townships with ice-free harbors.

The Danes cheerfully shouldered the cost, although there is criticism of methods. Moving of people from hunting settlements to towns is controversial. Uprooted from their traditional ways, many Greenlanders fell for the temptations of civilization.

Alcoholism and venereal disease are problems and there has been an increase in crime.

Moses Olsen, 34, Greenland's member of the Danish Parliament, says some things have gone wrong on the human level because a Danish style of living is being imposed on the Greenlanders.

He wants mre decisions taken by Greenlanders instead of in the Danish capital 2,500 miles away.

There is urgent need for new sources of income because Greenland's earnings cover only a tenth of the development funds being pumped in.

The Alaskan oil strikes have inspired hope, and there is feverish prospecting for hard minerals. A start has been made on developing tourism. But officials admit that they do not expect any real income from these sources for at least 10 years.

DUNCAN KIN OF THE YEAR NAMED

DUNCAN — Norm Nehajwich and Wendy Dueck were named Kinsman and Kinette of the year at their club's annual installation of officers Saturday.

Rookie-of-the-year award went to Jim Nightingale.

New executive of the Kinsmen club are: president, Ian Brown; first vice-president, Norm Nehajwich; second vice-president, Irv Dueck; secretary, John Campbell; treasurer, Rick Tice; registrar, Tony Morley; Bulletin editor, Bob D'Avingon; directors, Jim Anderson, Jim Nightingale and Larry Trahan.

New Kinette officers: president, Addie Nehajwich; vice-president, Liza Lee; recording secretary, Wendy Dueck; corresponding secretary, Kathy Young; treasurer, Joan Tice; registrar, Daphne Anderson; Bulletin editor, Pam Campbell; directors, Ann Morley and Jean Trahan.

Morphine Overdoses Cited in Two Deaths

Two Victoria men died as the result of overdoses of drugs, Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said after conducting separate inquiries into the death of Jerome Henry Hartnell, 18, of 907 Royal Terrace and Jack Matthew Mair, 35, of 1021 Government.

Hartnell was found dead in his bed at home Aug. 15. Mair was pronounced dead Aug. 24 at hospital after being found in his hotel room by a friend.

The coroner's findings were that the deceased "died as a result of the ingestion of morphine."

Hockey Season's Here!

Although regular-season appearances are nearly a month away, the hockey season began today in Victoria.

Los Angeles Kings of the National League and Victoria Cubs, the Cougar farm club in the Vancouver Island League, all opened training camps today in Memorial Arena. Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada Major Junior League begin training Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Cougar coach Mitch Pechet has come down with pneumonia and will miss the first week of practice.

Chief scout Bob Briscoe of Edmonton, who conducted the recent "rookie" camp in Edmonton, and Fred Watson, the Cub coach, will fill in for Pechet.

The annual intra-squad Cougar game is scheduled for 7 p.m. Sunday and the Victoria club has eight exhibition games scheduled before their league opener Oct. 5 in New Westminster.

Firemen Training In SCUBA

LAKE COWICHAN — Volunteer firemen here are being trained as scuba divers in an attempt to prevent drownings on the lake and riverfront.

The Lake Cowichan volunteer fire department now has two qualified divers and four in training. Department officials hope to be able to project the area 24 hours a day.

The scuba diving was prompted by a drowning two years ago. Swimmers use an area that stretches from the top end of the lake to Skutz Falls, on the Cowichan River, a distance of over 30 miles. Many of the swimming spots are not supervised.

Little Wilderness Left

A report to be released this week is expected to explode popular myths about unspoiled wilderness on Vancouver Island.

The report, a comprehensive study of the Nitinat Triangle and recreation on the island, is by the Victoria branch of the Sierra Club of B.C.

Chairman Ric Careless says the report shows that the upper part of the island is not the wilderness it appears. He asserts there is only one small pocket of Douglas Fir trees left on the island outside the acres is Cathedral Grove between Port Alberni and Parksville.

This pocket, he says, is in the Punuledge Valley in the southeast corner of Strathcona Provincial Park.

He accuses the forest firm of Crown-Zellerbach of trying to get the pocket for years.

Asserting the report will prove startling to many people, Careless says a network of roads and highways spreads over the island like varicose veins.

Cowichan Fair Crowd Up 1,000

DUNCAN — Fall showers failed to cut the turnout at the 105th Cowichan Exhibition over the weekend as the attendance rose nearly 1,000 over last year.

Nearly 18,000 people turned out for the agricultural exhibits, livestock, commercial displays, midway and special entertainment.

Intermittent showers threatened to interfere with the fair throughout Friday and Saturday, but Sunday was warm and sunny.

Opening the annual event Saturday afternoon, former Lt.-Gov. George Pearkes praised the Cowichan Agricultural Society, the oldest agricultural society west of the Great Lakes.

Top winner of the exhibition was Duncan resident Marie Johnny, who has a choice between a truck or car as first prize in a raffle.

Other names drawn for raffle prizes Sunday evening were: R. Plaskett, of Duncan who won a steer; Ann Evans, of Duncan, who won a zig-zag sewing machine, and Mary Ross, also of Duncan, who won a Cowichan Indian sweater donated by the Cowichan Indian Co-op.

Cowichan Days To Back Sports

LAKE COWICHAN — The $2,800 profit from Cowichan Lake Days in June will support minor sports in the community, says chairman Ted Johnson.

The amount of money raised is an indication of the "excellent co-operation of all concerned," Johnson said.

Yummy Mums

Some of Victoria's finest chrysanthemums and dahlias posed a problem for judges Saturday at the Victoria Chrysanthemum Society's annual mum and dahlia show at Centennial United Church.

According to a society spokesman, the blooms were all so beautiful it was difficult to choose winners for the various classes.

But winners there were, and they include: James McColl for aggregate of show, open mum class, first in open mums, best chrysanthemum, class two to six varieties and best speciment bloom registered since 1939.

Other trophy recipients were Harry Leake for the best vase of mums; Albert Renfrew for best vase of sprays; Wynn Elford, best exhibit in classes 3 to 15, large disbuds, selected variety class and medium disbuds; Harry van Dyk for his best selection of sprays and dahlias; Robert Begg, best bowl of mums; Albert Hall for novice mums and best novice mums; E. W. Britt, best bloom in novice mums; Mrs. W. A. Kempster and Mrs. Albert Chapman tied for first in aggregate flower arranging; Mrs. Chapman, a first in arrangement; and Mrs. Johan van Dyk, best vase of novice dahlias.

Controls Urged On Hardwoods

QUEBEC (CP) — Furniture manufacturers have called on the provincial government to exercise a more direct control over the production and marketing of hardwood in Quebec.

The furniture manufacturers suggested various short-term and long-term solutions to their industry's wood supply problem in a brief to the parliamentary committee on the natural resources.

The industry, represented by the Quebec Furniture Manufacturers, Association, emphasized the fact that the Quebec furniture industry is wood-oriented to about 80 per cent of its operations.

It also said that in most cases it is the economic lifeblood of the regions in which it is represented.

The association brought attention to the "dangerously low" wood inventories as well as to postponed expansion programs and to the fact that orders have been turned down because of lack of wood.

GRAVE CONCERN

Gilles Martin, general manager of the association, said that wood supply problems are causing grave concern to the industry at a time when it is entering a critical period of growth.

"In 1972 sales are projected at more than $335 million-compared with $289 million in 1970 — and the export is growing."

The manufacturers provide direct employment to about 20,000 people in Quebec.

The current annual lumber requirements of the furniture industry in Quebec are about 100 million board feet — 65 per cent cherry wood, 25 per cent maple 10 per cent other species — equal to half of the Quebec production of hardwoods and to one-third of the total national production.

SUGGEST SOLUTION

The association suggested the following short-term solutions:

—The government should make it mandatory for sawmills to offer their lumber first to local wood processing industries.

—The lands and forest department should temporarily expand wood cutting rights.

—Wood-producing farmers should be encouraged to supply regional sawmills with wood species used by the furniture industry.

Some long-term measures to 'achieve guaranteed wood supplies" included:

—The definition of a rational wood resources management policy with an embargo on species used by secondary industries, if necessary.

—A reforestation policy which takes into account the furniture industry's growing need for hardwood.

VSE TRADING CONTINUES HIGHER

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange has reported moderately active trading in August with a volume of 52.4 million shares, an increase of half a million over July.

The value of shares traded was $45.3 million, an improvement of $6.5 million over July.

It was more active this year than in August 1971 with a 4.4-million share and $9.7-million gain.

Cumulative figures for the first eight months of 1972 remain well ahead of the same period last year with an increase of 245.2 million shares and $243.2 million.

Largest section gain was in the mines which showed an increase of 154.6 million shares and $177.8 million.

The second greatest increase in volume occurred in the interim section, which posted a 71.4 million share gain. Second best dollar value gain was in the industrial section which was $39.2 million better than in the same period in 1971.

Conditions, Pay to Improve Without Union, Say Salesmen

By Al Forrest
Times Business Editor

Victoria real estate salesmen are not certain they need a union like those in Ontario but many are just as certain they need improvements in their working conditions.

"Working conditions are worse for real estate salesmen than for anybody," one salesman said.

"We work long hours and the company makes all the money. Maybe there should be a union."

Said another: "The agents (owners) hire too many salesmen. They squeeze us until there's no juice left and then they toss us aside and hire some more. There should be some restrictions."

But Gilbert Calvert, president of the Victoria Society of Real Estate Salesmen, says the problems can be solved without forming a union like in Ontario.

LACK OF FREEDOM

"To me a union implies the lack of a sound relationship between workers and owners and it also implies lack of freedom of action for the salesmen," he said.

Calvert said his society has already formed a joint council with Victoria real estate agents to negotiate problems arising between the owners and salesmen.

The joint council, which Calvert says is unique in Canada, consists of seven salesmen from his society plus seven owners with a non-voting chairman.

Problems regarding working conditions and commissions are sorted out through consensus.

It is not a case of salesmen on one side of the table and agents on the other. It is a round-table discussion and each member of the joint council is free to vote as he wishes."

Calvert said one of the things real estate salesmen prize most is the freedom to make as much money as they can.

The setting of minimum salaries tends to mean that the minimum salary becomes the maximum, he said.

He said the joint council approach is sorting out the problems of real estate salesmen without resorting to unionism.

In August the Ontario Labor Relations Board ruled that the 15,000 real estate salesmen in that province were entitled to form a union as they were employees and not self-employed as the real estate companies had argued.

Top priority of the real estate union in Ontario is to set minimum salaries for all salesmen with a corresponding reduction in commission rates. This would guarantee all salesmen at least some income each month. At present if a salesman makes no sales he has no income.

The Ontario real estate union will also stress formation of a committee on ethics to deal with practices within the industry.

The Ontario union will seek to weed out illegal part-time salesmen. By law, a real estate salesman in Ontario or B.C. must not be employed in any other job at the same time.

In Ontario the real estate salesmen are expected to join the Office and Professional Employees International Union.

NOT APPROACHED

In Vancouver, Opal Skilling, secretary-treasurer of Local 15 of the Office and Technical Employees Union, said her group has not been approahced by any B.C. real estate salesmen so far.

She said her union was far too busy to take the initiative in organizing any salesmen who approach for help.

She said the union organizes a diverse group including credit union workers, draftsmen, artists and accountants.

At present there are about 750 salesmen in the Victoria area, a total which the Victoria Real Estate Board has said is too high.

However the board has left it up to the individual firms to control their own hiring, although it has urged restraint.

Other B.C. areas have reported a high number of real estate salesmen with the peak likely being West Vancouver which at one time had one salesman for every 24 houses in the district.

Calvert said that problems of surplus salesmen and commission levels could be solved within the procedures established by the joint council in Victoria.

He said the council is at present reviewing the commission rates paid to salesmen in the Victoria area.

"If there are problems we can solve them without a union," he said.

Garibaldi

Garibaldi Lifts Ltd., operators of Whistler Mountain ski resort, reports net income of $154,622 for the first six months of this year, an increase of $17,737 over the same period last year.

Franz Wilhelmsen, president of Garibladi, said profits had not come up to expectations in the 1971-72 ski season, largely because of high winds which created numerous problems.

Total revenue for the first six months of 1972 was $729,987, an increase of $43,321 over the corresponding period in 1971.

Imperial Bank

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, in its interim report to shareholders for the nine months ended July 31, 1972, reported total assets of $13,2 billion, an increase of $2.3 billion or 20 per cent over the previous year. The increase was due largely to a higher level of loans, with important increases in smaller business loans, mortgage loans for housing, and personal loans.

Balance of revenue for the nine months increased to $111 million compared with $84 million last year, an improvement of 32 per cent, reflecting higher income from loans and other operating revenue. International operations continued to contribute to the improvment in earnings.

Balance of revenue after provision for income taxes amounted to $58.4 million for the nine months compared with $40.5 million for the same period last year.

China Buys Boeing Jets

SEATTLE (AP) — Boeing Co. officials have confirmed the firm has signed a purchase agreement with China involving 10 707 jetliners.

He said the package sale would run to about $150 million.

The spokesman said final details of the agreement and contract were worked out by a Boeing sales team that has been in Peking since mid-April.

The price tag on the 707s is about $10 million. A spokesman said with spare parts and training and extra equipment the Chinese sale probably would amount to $150 million.

The department of Commerce earlier granted Boeing a $150 million export license.

Flame Goes Out on Troubled Olympics

MUNICH (CP) — The 1972 Olympics, a mixture of triumph and tragedy, end today with the dousing of the flame that burned for 17 days, some of them the most momentous in the history of the Modern Games.

Crises rooted in racially-troubled Africa and the divided Middle East intruded on the festival. A movement dedicated to peace found itself confronted first with political bitterness and finally with terror.

The death of 11 Israeli Olympians in an Arab terrorist raid left Olympic ideals tattered and subdued the festive atmosphere.

Halted for 24 hours on their 11th day last Wednesday after the murders, the Games might have ended right then and there but for Avery Brundage, who at the end of his 20-year reign as Olympic boss insisted they "must go on," and they did.

Now the scene shifts to Montreal, where in four years Canada will hold its first Olympics.

The Brundage era over, the 21st Olympics may take on a new look under the stewardship of Irish peer Lord Killanin, who succeeds Brundage as president of the International Olympic Committee.

The 20th Games, which drew crowds of 80,000 daily for the glamor track and field events that ended Sunday, was left with only the traditional Grand Prix des Nations jumping event and the closing ceremony on today's program.

Brundage, whose term of office officially ends Sept. 30, was to make the closing address, calling upon the youth of all countries to assemble four years from now at Montreal.

Organizers of the 1976 games already have said they have no intention of changing their plans despite the disasters of Munich.

For Canada today, it was the last chance for a gold medal, a situation identical to the one four years ago when the equestrians led by Tom Gayford won on the last day at Mexico City.

The Canadian squad of 206 competitors already had equalled its 1968 total medal count of five—winning two silver and three bronze in Munich.

The Russians went on a 16-gold spree during the weekend, including a gold disputed by the United States in basketball, and won the team championship by a wide margin.

Fifty gold medals in all were in the Soviet bag, a total surpassed only twice—by the U.S. with 70 in 1904 and Britain with 56 in 1908. Runner-up U.S. had 33—off a dozen from 1968.

The results showed a firm swing away from the U.S. toward Europe. Germany won a total of 32 gold medals—the East Gemans leading with 20.

Tiny Finland, a country of 4.5 million, crowned its achievements in track and field Sunday by completing a remarkable distance triple. Lasse Viren, the running policeman, added the 5,000-metre gold to the one he won last week in the 10,000. Pekka Vasala outran defending champion Kip Keino of Kenya in the 1,500 metres.

Viren is the first to achieve the difficult "five-and-10" double since Vladimir Kuts of Russia in the 1956 Games at Melbourne, Australia.

The U.S. salvaged three track and field gold to end up with six — lowest ever. Frank Shorter upset Mamo Wolde, Ethiopia's defending champion, in the marathon and the U.S. took the long jump and one of the four relay titles, equalling the world record in the men's 400-metre race.

Seven world records fell and thee others were equalled besides the relay in track and field competition and 11 additional Olympic marks fell. The swimmers did even better, smashing world marks in 22 events, equalling a 23rd and wiping out every Olympic record in the book.

The United States, on top of the table since the 1960 Rome Olympics, tottered through a series of sporting setbacks and incredible fiascos to a position of mediocrity.

The final humiliation came when it lost 51-50 the basketball title for the first time since the sport was introduced at the 1936 Berlin games — after a sensational finish. Both teams thought they had won before an official inquiry awarded the gold to the Russians. (See story below.)

The bizarre basketball windup and the life suspensions imposed today on 11 Pakistani field hockey players added two more dismal chapters to previously marred by disrespect, suspensions and conroversy.

Pakistan lost the gold medal to West Germany, 1-0, in a rough match marred by fouls and which ended in a near-riot. It was the first time since 1920 that a team from the sub-continent, either India or Pakistan, failed to win the field hockey event.

It was the second life suspension imposed during these games. American runners Vince Matthews and Wayne Collett were expelled from the Olympics earlier in the week because of their so-called disrespectful behavior on the victory stand during the playing of the national anthem.

But the abiding memory of these Games will not be the medals race or the displays by 8,000 competitors in 22 sports.

These games will be remembered for the 24 hours of terror starting last Tuesday which ended with 17 persons — the 11 Israelis, five Arabs and one policeman — dead.

The lasting tension was in evidence again Sunday night when reports swept the Olympic centre that five shots had been fired in the Olympic Village. Police carried out a massive search but after 90 minutes reported all quiet.

A police spokesman said they assumed it was someone's "nasty prank" but in the atmosphere at the Olympics, it was enough to start the alarm bells ringing all over again.

VACANCY ON STAND added another sad chapter Sunday to "Troubled Olympics" when U.S. basketball team refused to accept second-place silver medal. Russian team took gold after defeating Americans 51-50 in bizarre windup Saturday.

U.S. Told 'To Learn How to Lose'

MUNICH (AP) — "They have to learn how to lose, once," said the man the Americans blame for giving Russia the three extra seconds it needed to take the Olympic basketball gold medal away from them.

With the Americans conspicuously absent from the No. 2 platform, R. William Jones, secretary general of the International Amateur Basketball Federation (FIBA), and just handed the grinning, waving Russians their medals.

The ceremony came nearly 24 hours after a U.S.-Russian showdown with two sensational last-second victories — one by each side — and two opposing victory celebrations.

The delay followed nearly seven hours of meetings by FIBA's jury of appeals over which ending was the correct one. Russia won the game by a vote of 3-2, one source said.

The scorekeeper maintained the Americans won.

The International Olympic Committee's executive board was to take up the America's protest today, but the IOC has never been known to intervene in technical aspects of running sports events.

The Americans, who hadn't lost in 63 games since basketball became an Olympic sport in 1936, already had decided unanimously not to accept the silver medal, saying the silver is for the loser — and they hadn't lost.

Spectacular ending No. 1:

After the Americans had trailed for 39 minutes 54 seconds into the 40-minute game, Doug Collins of the U.S. stole the ball from a Russian, rushed down the court for a layup shot, and was fouled.

He fired off his free throws quickly and sank both. Three seconds were left and the Russians couldn't even get off a good shot in time.

The Americans won 50-49 and went wild on the floor, jumping for joy and hugging each other.

Spectacular ending No. 2:

As the FIBA jury explained it later, there had been "disturbing effects and misunderstandings which influenced the normal flow of play" so the last three seconds were not valid.

The clock was reset to three seconds, and action resumed.

It was like a long touchdown pass in football as six-foot-seven Aleksander Belov leaped high between American defenders Kevin Joyce and Jim Forbes, hauled down a 90-foot throw-in from the opposite end line and scored just before the buzzer, with Joyce and Forbes sprawled on the floor.

The Russians won 51-50 and had their turn to celebrate, tumbling into a heap on the floor in their rush to congratulate each other.

The Americans maintained that the "disturbances" in the last three seconds were the Russians going on the court to call for a time out to which they were not entitled, and that FIBA officials did not have the authority to make them play another three seconds.

U.S. officials and players, as well as West German scorekeeper Hans Tenschert, said it was FIBA's Jones who ordered the three seconds replaced.

Jones and the five-member FIBA jury said it was Brazilian referee Renate Righetto, who was in charge of the game.

Jones called the issue "an escalation of stupid incidents."

The Americans, he said, "had reason to be sorry because they were leading by one point with three seconds left and could have won with a little bit of luck."

"But they have to know how to lose, even when they think they are right."

One definite loser was coach Hank Iba. Somebody picked his pocket of a wallet containing $370 as he signed the official U.S. protest after the game.

The IOC today banned 11 Pakistani field hockey players from Olympic competition for life, saying they were disrespectful at the medal-awards ceremony.

The IOC executive board acted against Pakistan's silver-medalist team after the International Field Hockey Federation suspended the Pakistan Hockey Federation and announced "grave sanctions" against the Pakistan Olympic team.

The Pakistanis were allowed to keep their medals.

A new charge was also placed against the Pakistanis.

The IOC spokesman said that in addition to their awards ceremony misbehavior, some Pakistanis "beat off a doctor at the doping test' given all Olympic medalists. The spokesman said the players were rough with the physician but did not seriously hurt him.

The Pakistanis lost the Olympic final Sunday to West Germany 1-0.

Pakistan fans, irate at the officiating, nearly rioted. Pakistan players twirled their silver medals during ceremony and turned away from the West German flag as the German anthem was being played. The crowd booed and jeered.

The 22,921 fans jammed into Clarke Stadium were chanting "We're No. 1" as Edmonton Eskimos left the field after a 27-20 victory over Calgary Stampeders Sunday.

But in the Edmonton dressing room, where coach Ray Jauch might be expected to be celebrating the win that gave the Eskimos first place in the Western Football Conference, it was a different story.

"'We're not No. 1," said Jauch despite his team's 6-1 record. "We're too young and haven't been together as a team long enough, and can't field our best team because of injuries. We're not there yet . . . but we may be eventually.

While deploring the injury situation, Jauch had praise for quarterback Tom Wilkinson who replaced first-stringer Bruce Lemmerman, who suffered a shoulder separation early in the season.

Wilkinson fired a three-yard touchdown pass to George McGowan in the second quarter and an 11-yard toss to newcomer Roy Bell for another major in the final minutes of play.

Edmonton's other touchdown came when defensive back Dave Walker blocked a Stampeder punt and ran it to paydirt.

Dave Cutler's often-erractic toe supplied the Eskimos with their nine remaining points on two 22-yard field goals and three converts.

The Stampeders were held to two 41-yard field goals kicked by Larry Robinson in the first quarter and didn't score again until the fourth. Robinson also converted both Calgary touchdowns.

Newcomer Fritz Seyferth plunged two yards into Edmonton's end zone early in the fourth and quarterback Jim Lindsey hit Gary Kerr on a five-yard touchdown pass with two minutes left.

In the Eastern Football Conference, it was the unusual that decided both games.

Ottawa Rough Riders were trailing Montreal Alouettes 23-21 early in the final quarter at Ottawa, Saturday, when Rider tackle Rudy Sims intercepted a George Mira pass and lumbered 26 yards for the go-ahead touchdown. Riders later added another and a field goal for a 38-23 victory.

At Toronto, Sunday Hamilton Tiger-Cats were down by four points in the final quarter when tackle Bruce Smith picked off a Wally Gabler pass and took it to the Argonaut six-yard line. Dave Fleming ran for the touchdown on the next play and the Ticats pulled out a 22-18 triumph two stay two points behind Ottawa in the EFC race with four wins against three defeats.

Kasko Doesn't Know Why, But Red Sox Move Ahead

By The Associated Press

Eddie Kasko always has been known for his diplomacy, and he certainly won't change now that his Boston Red Sox have their biggest lead of the season in the tight, four-team American League East pennant race.

"I couldn't pick out a single aspect as to why we're winning," tactful Kasko said Sunday after the Red Sox had swept a doubleheader from Cleveland Indians 5-1 in 12 innings and 2-0, increasing their lead to 1½ games over runnerup Baltimore Orioles.

"We've been getting good pitching for quite a while," added the Boston manager. "But if I said the pitchers were doing it, the hitters would get mad. It's been a combination of everything."

PALMER WINS 19th

Baltimore, winner of the East chmpionship the past three years, blanked Milwaukee Brewers 2-0 as Jim Palmer scattered seven hits for his 19th victory.

New York Yankees, in fourth place, 2½ games back, dropped Detroit from second to third, two games behind Boston, stopping the Tigers 5-0 on Mel Stottlemyre's three-hitter.

Oakland Athletics, seeking their second straight West Division title, increased their lead to 3½ games over Chicago, trouncing the Texas Rangers 7-2 while the White Sox were losing to California Angels 5-1.

Kansas City Royals downed Minnesota Twins 3-1 in the other American League game.

ON HOT STREAK

Boston's two victories over Cleveland gave the Red Sox 14 triumphs in their last 17 games and a 46-26 record since JXULY 1, WHEN since July 1, when they were 7½ games back.

"We're on a hot streak," admitted Kasko, "but we haven't played Detroit or Baltimore in quite a while."

The Yankee shutout went to Mel Stottlemyre, his sixth of the season and 36th of his career, tying Red Ruffing for the New York club record for righthanders.

REDLEGS SLUMPING

In the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers edged Houston Astros 3-2; Cubs beat Philadelphia Phillies 5-3, Montreal Expos topped Pittsburgh Pirates 8-2, New York Mets edged St. Louis Cardinals 3-2. Cincinnati beat San Francisco Giants 8-7 in the first game of a doubleheader. The Giants won the second game 8-2. San Diego Padres shutout Atlanta Braves 1-0 in Game No. 1 of their twinbill but the Braves came back for a 4-1 victory in the second.

PLAYER'S PUTTING PRODUCES PROFIT

AKRON, Ohion (AP) — Gary Player, once a $70-a-month club pro, earned a cool $25,000-a-day over the weekend.

The 36-year-old Professional Golf Association champion flew 10,000 miles back to his native South Africa today with a $50,000 cheque for his third World Series of Golf title Sunday.

His rounds of 71-71—142 beat Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino by two shots. Nicklaus shot the only sub par round of the tournament, a 69, to finish at 144 with Trevino, who had a closing 70. They each earned $11,500.

Fourth-place Gay Brewer won $5,000 for shooting 73-72—145.

"I don't ever remember playing 36 holes and putting so well. I don't recall hitting one bad putt," said Player. The little South African one-putted ten of the first 14 holes, once sinking five consecutive one-putters on the front nine.

Weaver Rallies On Playoff Hole

Times News Services

De Witt Weaver of Atlanta, faltering on the final two holes of regulation play, bounced back on the first playoff hole to capture the $100,000 Southern Open golf tournament at Columbus, Ga., Sunday, by beating out Chuck Courtney.

Weaver, earning his first Professional Golf Association tour victory since the 1971 U.S. match play championship event, tipped in a six-inch par putt while Courtney, whose approach to the No. 1 green landed in rough on the left side, missed his eight-foot par putt.

Weaver went to the 17th green Sunday with a three-shot lead over Courtney. But the former Southern Methodist University football quarterback took a bogey on No. 17 and then had a double bogey seven on the finishing hole for a two-over 72 and a 276 total.

Courtney birdied the 17th to close the margin to only one shot, but he missed an opportunity to win in regulation when he bogeyed the final hole for a 70.

Chi Chi Rodriguez, the colorful Puerto Rican, nailed down third place with a 71 for the day and a 277 total.

George Knudson of Toronto shot a 73 in Sunday's final rnd for a 285 total and a $695 share of the purse. Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg won $142 with his 74 performance Sunday and a 290 total.

At Dallas, Jane Blalock won a sudden-death playoff with veteran Kathy Whitworth for the Dallas Civitan ladies' championship.

Miss Blalock, who has a $5 million anti-trust suit pending against the Ladies Professional Golf Association, sank an eight-foot putt to win the playoff and $4,950 first-place money in the $33,000 event.

She and Miss Whitworth finished the day tied at 211 after Miss Whitworth fired a four-under-par 68.

Betty Burfeindt and Gloria Ehret closed fast with 69s to share third-place money, $2,587 each, while Jocelyne Bourassa of Shawnigan, Que., had 75-77-71 — 221 for a $450 share of the winnings.

Morgan Enjoys Packing Success

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

John Morgan "felt right" and, pychologically speaking, so was his timing.

The 24-year-old unattached Victoria professional, one of the leading money-winners on this year's Canadian circuit, scored his first-ever hometown success Sunday by claiming top honors in Molson's Esquimalt Open at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Opening with a two-over 74 on Saturday, Morgan charged in with a four-under-par 68 Sunday to pocket $500.

Perhaps more important, Morgan may have added a psychological lift into the already-packed suitcases that he will be taking to Los Angeles.

HEADING SOUTH

Morgan left immediately following Sunday's prize presentation for California and a bid to earn a Professional Golfers' Association tournament players card. In order to qualify for the U.S. tour, Morgan must first pass the sectional trials school which gets under way next week.

"It's a nice way to go," said John who, for the better part of two years now, has concentrated his attentions on "the thinking man's game."

"I just felt right today," said Morgan of his sub-par round, one of only four recorded during Molson's two-day test. He bagged six birdies, two bogies and 12 pars en route to the 68 that enabled him to cruise home a two-stroke winner over Bobby Cox of Vancouver.

Cowichan's Bill Wakeham closed with a 69 for a 145 total and third place.

Cox and amateur Ken McLennan of Port Angeles, who posted 71s Sunday, were the only other par-breakers. McLennan's 146 total stood up as the best among amateurs, nosing out Gerry Puder of Vancouver, Bill Shvetz of Uplands, Gord Rand of Cedar Hill and Canadian Amateur champion Doug Roxbough by one stroke.

Shvetz, the one-time pro hockey players who now tends Uplands' greens and fairways, turned out to be an easy winner of low net honors. A five-handicapper, Shvetz fired 72-75 — 147 for a net 137, three strokes better than McLennan, J. Campbell and Urban Allen of Gorge Vale.

Regals Relish Ike's Parting Shot

Ike MacKay paid a suitable farewell to Victoria Regals on Saturday, pounding in the lone goal to produce a 1-0 Premier Soccer League victory over Columbus before about 450 fans at Royal Athletic Park.

MacKay, linkman Brian Robinson and goalkeeper Graham Lee — all back from Mexico City after Canada was eliminated from World Cup contention last Wednesday — all played a strong part in the victory.

Robinson proved outstanding in the midfield and Lee had to work for his shutout with some spectacular saves as league-leading Columbus made a desperate bid for a draw late in the match.

MacKay, playing his last match before leaving to attend the University of Alberta in Edmonton, sparked a great all-round effort by the Victorians, still the lowest-scoring club in the league.

Overall, there were plenty of chances early in the match and some good, clean shots by Bob Bolitho, Trini Douglas, Mark Robb and Robinson. Only the stellar goaltending of Bill Grant, coupled with some excellent defensive moves by backs Bruce Wilson and Bernie Fagan, kept Columbus from suffering a greater defeat.

It was 28 minutes into the match when Douglas crossed the ball. Ash Valdah nodded the ball to MacKay's feet, and Grant didn't have a chance.

Columbus, missing the services of wingers Alan Sproates, who has returned to play in England, and Sergio Zanatta, who was unavailable, has only lost three matches in 18 starts this season.

Smooth running and well-timed passes were an additional factor in the Victoria win, which left Regals two points behind runner-up Croatia and 10 points in arrears to Columbus.

In the only other match of the weekend, Vancouver Eintracht spotted Richmond two goals before coming back to drop the host club 4-2 on Sunday.

Chris Bennett scored to give Richmond a 1-0 half-time lead and Dar Webster made it 2-0 before Eintracht got untracked. Buzz Parsons and Glen Johnson, two other members of Canada's national team, paced the comeback effort. Parsons scored twice while Johnson and Ron McDonald chipped in singles.

Ilie Beats Ashe

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Romanian Davis Cup star Ilie Nastase has won the coveted men's singles title of the 1972 Open tennis championship, and in doing so has achieved a personal goal — respect for his play on grass.

Nastase, seeded fourth in the tournament, beat sixth-seeded Arthur Ashe of Miami 3-6, 6-3, 6-7, 6-4, 6-3, in Sunday's final.

Prior to this year, Nastase was noted only for his clay court prowess, but in a three-month span, players have started to respect his grass game.

In July he was the Wimbledon runnerup to Stan Smith. In August he took the Eastern Grass Courts crown. Now in September he has the U.S. Open title and the prestige that comes with it.

Billie Jean King got even more respect for her play when she downed Australia's Kerry Melville, 6-3, 7-5, in the women's final Saturday.

"I was so tired out there," Mrs. King said after the match. "My legs hurt, my back hurt. All I could do was hope Kerry felt the same way."

Mrs. King won the title in 1971 and 1967 and also wears this year's French Open and Wimbledon crowns.

In women's doubles, Francoise Durr of France and Betty Stove of the Netherlands beat Margaret Court of Australia and Virgina Wade of England, 6-3, 1-6, 6-3. The mixed doubles crown went to Mrs. Court and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., when the beat Nastase and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco 6-3, 7-5.

Hot-Riding Surgenor Wins Fourth Straight

Ross Surgenor collected his fourth straight main event victory Saturday night, winning the 50-lap feature Early-Late Stock Car Association of the Northwest race at Western Speedway.

Surgenor, who gained the lead on the 35th lap, paced a Victoria sweep of the first three places in the ELSCAN super-stock event.

Terry Forsyth was second, Ross McIntyre was third and Ron Eaton of Tacoma, the ELSCAN point leader, placed fourth in a three-car cluster that crossed the finish line half a lap behind Surgenor.

Mike Barrett of Tacoma led for the first 11 laps before Gary Kershaw of Victoria charged from the back of the pack to collect the lead.

MOTOR PROBLEMS

Kershaw, who had fast time and won the "A" trophy dash, then began leaking oil and slowed down, lost the lead to Surgenor and retired to the pits on the 40th lap.

Bun on Sunday at Nanaimo's Grandview Bowl, Surgenor's luck ran out after setting fast time and winning the fast heat.

The right rear tire of his car developed a slow leak in what turned out to be a 59-lap main and the Victorian kept going wide in the turns. Despite this handicap and a spin-out while running second on the 45th lap, he managed to take third place behind runner-up Forsyth and winner Eaton.

Eaton took over the lead on the fifth lap and was never headed the remainder of the distance.

The main event was shortened one lap when Jack Gold of Nanaimo blew his engine on the backstretch of the 48th lap and the car caught fire. Gold was unhurt but officials didn't think it was worth the bother to re-start for a single run around the track.

Incogs rallied to score a stunning victory over league-champion Cowichan to win the Knockout Cup in the final match of the Victoria and District Cricket Association season Saturday at Beacon Hill Park.

Cowichan, which clinched the league title for the ninth time in 10 years the previous weekend, was trying for a double crown in the final of this annual competition.

But Incogs had other ideas.

Cowichan batted first and reached 122 runs for seven wickets in the regulation 32 overs with Tim Lord contributing 40, Peter Lord 17 and Neil Brett-Davies 17 not out. Chris Mills toppled four Cowichan wickets for 38 runs to lead the Incog offence.

Mike Walsh, who came in late in the innings, led Incogs with 43 runs as the fourth-place finishers in the six-team setup reached 123 for seven in 30 overs.

Eric Kjekstad chipped in 29 and Jim Wenman added 14.

Israel Rejects Gambler Lansky

LANSKY
. . . can't stay

JERUSALEM — The Israeli Supreme Court ruled today that Meyer Lansky, the U.S. gambling czar, has tight links with U.S. underworld leaders and organized crime, and turned down his appeal for citizenship. The court noted that U.S.-style organized crime has not yet hit Israel but said that if Lansky were allowed to stay, "there is reasonable cause to fear that . . . he will be a danger to public safety." No immediate move was made to deport the reputed financial wizard of the U.S. underworld, and there was no sign that Israel would send him back to the United States where he has been indicted on gambling charges by two grand juries. A government spokesman said "the ball is now in Lansky's hands and he is expected to act in accordance with the Supreme Court decision" — meaning Lansky should leave the country. The interior ministry said it was offering Lansky, whose U.S. passport has been cancelled except for travel to the United States, an Israeli travel document to go to any country which would accept him. Lansky himself refused to talk about his plans.

LONDON, Ont. — Brig.-Gen. E. M. Leslie, of Canadian forces in Cyprus for the last four years, has resigned from the army and will seek nomination Tuesday as Liberal candidate in Parry Sound — Muskoka riding. Gen. Leslie returned to Canada from Cyprus three weeks ago. He is the son of Gen. A. G. L. MacNaughton, commander of Canadian forces during the Second World war and federal minister of national defence under former prime minister Mackenzie King. The son changed his name after a childless aunt and uncle left him their estate on condition he took their name.

MOSCOW — Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's adviser on national security, began meeting with Soviet officials today. But speculation that he would also talk peace with Le Duc Tho of North Vietnam collapsed when Tho flew on to Paris. Kissinger arrived Sunday. He told reporters that "we are here to continue talks," an apparent reference to Nixon's meeting with the Russians in May. But one of the five aides with Kissinger was John Negroponte, a former member of the Paris peace talks delegation who is fluent in Vietnamese.

MOSCOW — Boris Spassky returned home to a loser's welcome Sunday night, as the man who let the world chess championship slip from Soviet hands for the first time in 24 years. The only concession authorities made to the ex-champion was that he didn't have to open his bags for customs inspection. Spassky, who lost the title to American Bobby Fischer in Reykjavik, had a second-class ticket on an Aeroflot flight from Copenhagen, where he stopped over for a couple of days.

For the welcoming party of seven friends and relatives he had a weak smile. To an American journalist who had met him in Reykjavik, he expressed no regrets about losing the crown. All he wanted to do now, he said, was rest. "I will spend a week or so in Moscow and then take the vacation I've wanted to take," he added. He said he would pass up the chess Olympiad in Yogoslavia this month, but counted on playing in the San Antonio, Tex., tournament Nov. 18. "I asked Bobby if he was going to play in San Antonio and he said, 'no, the money wasn't enough'," Spassky said.

Angela Visits Berlin

Interceptions Help Dolphins Break It Open

Winless Burnaby Spartans flashed an offense, but it was the Victoria Dolphin defence that settled matters in Sunday's Big Four Junior Football game at Royal Athletic Park.

Two touchdown-producing interceptions enabled the Frank Hindle-coached Dolphins to defeat Spartans 27-12 before a crowd of about 400 fans.

Protecting a slim, 13-12 lead early in the fourth quarter, Dolphins pulled away when Herb Benty ran an interception back 45 yards. Don McLaren sealed the victory — Dolphins' third of the year — with a 20-yard runback of an interception later.

Eric Mosley's five-yard burst, capping a Victoria drive that led to a major the first time they had the ball, and John Flynn, on a 44-yard pass-and-run, scored Dolphins' other touchdowns.

Leon Mitchell made good on three of the four convert attempts to round out Victoria's total.

Mark McKinnon scored Burnaby's lone major on a 42-yard pass-and-run play with quarterback Brian Davis. Spartans' other points were scored by John Block, who kicked two singles, and Brian McAdam, who booted a 27-yard field goal and a single.

Burnaby, which had managed only 18 points in three previous starts, showed a surprisingly-strong attack, gaining 302 yards compared to the 249 recorded by Dolphins.

Victory kept Dolphins one point behind leading Vancouver Meralomas, who defeated Vancouver Blue Bombers 37-7 in Sunday's other game.

Oak Bay Holds On To Rugby Offering

Oak Bay Wanderers of the Victoria Rugby Union's first division went ahead and won their own inaugural invitational tournament Sunday, Downing Richmond 27-7 in the final at Windsor Park.

Bob Iversen led the Oak Bay attack with two trys while clubmate Gerry Hoskins kicked a penalty goal and two converts. Single trys were added by Mike Penn and Lloyd Anderson while Ron Caton booted two other conversions.

Richmond, which led 7-3 at the half and put up a strong fight before folding in the late stages of the contest, gained a try from Bren Jones and a penalty goal from Ron Clifff.

Wanderers advanced to the final through an official decision after playing to an 11-11 draw with Seattle Rugby Club in one of Saturday's opening matches at St. Michael's University School.

Richmond moved up with a 14-3 win over Saanich Velox the same day.

Velox gained a small measure of satisfaction by hammering Seattle 26-3 in the consolation final Sunday.

Dissident Quebecers Back in NDP Fold

By PAUL WHITELAW
Special to the Times

MONTREAL — The New Democratic Party and its dissident Quebec wing emerged from the weekend on better terms after a special convention here modified the Quebecers' controversial policy of "self-determination" for their province.

About 140 delegates of the Quebec NDP, meetisg Friday and Saturday in an east-end school, agreed to accept a modified electoral platform which had been previously studied and accepted by national executives of the party in Ottawa.

The new policy, an official text of which is to be released later this week, modifies the strident wording of a manifesto issued by the Quebec wing this summer and subsequently denounced by national leader David Lewis.

Basically, it takes the previous stress off the eventuality of Quebec independence while promising that NDP representation in the Commons would be "to the advantage of Quebecers" if a succession agreement one day might have to be negotiated.

The new platform also notes that Quebec independence is a subject that will be decided by Quebecers in provincial elections, and not part of a federal election campaign.

All Quebecers who wish to construct a new socialist framework, it continues in part, should work together fraternally regardless of their constitutional viewpoints.

Raymond Laliberte, president of the Quebec wing, told reporters Saturday that "while reaffirming our right to construct our own platform we hame maintained and reaffirmed our right to self-determination and settled the problem we had with Ottawa."

David Lewis said in an interview in Toronto that the Quebec wing's revised platform had eliminated differences on federalism with the national party.

Lewis said he did not think separatism would be an issue in the election campaign because all four national party leaders felt the same way about a united Canada.

The NDP has nominated candidates in 20 of Quebec's 74 federal ridings, and Quebec leader Raymond Laliberte said he is hopeful that number will be doubled within the next two weeks.

Protest Caravan Crosses Cascades

HOPE (CP) — A protest caravan of more tha 1n00 vehcles took part in a four-hour Sunday drive across the Cascade Mountains from Merritt to Hope in a bid to get the British Columbia government to build an 80-mile highway linking the B.C. Interior with the lower mainland.

The 10th annual caravan, organized the Merritt Chamber of Commerce, drew a record 375 demonstrators.

"We want the government to build a highway from Hope along the former CPR tracks into the Interior," said Henry Norgaard, an official of the Merritt chamber.

"Such a highway would cut 65 miles off the journey to Vancouver."

Kamloops Mayor Gordon Nicol, who took part in the ride, said highways to and from the Interior were reaching their peak capacity. "We need another route to relieve the pressure," he said.

The protest route took the 100 cars and two buses over fragile wooden bridges, washed-out creek beds and a narrow road flanking the Coquihalla River which runs through a deep canyon.

Schools Without Tears The Biggest Job Ahead

A "slow and steady revamping" is in the cards, it would appear, when Eileen Dailly takes over as provincial minister of education, which explains why I hope to arrange a meeting between the lady and three lads named Mark, Jack and Bobby.

It might just convince Mrs. Dailly that the change should be fast and furious.

Mark, Jack and Bobby are the boys I picked up most mornings through the last school year on their way to Colwood Elementary. Now once again they're at the corner when I'm on my way into the office. They are each 10 years of age, though Bobby will be 11 next Thursday. I think you could fairly describe them as typical.

Our running conversation is about school and our common bond is that they hate it almost as much as I hated it. Mark, who is the spokesman for the three, puts it flatly and succinctly: "School is dumb."

★ ★ ★

I bring something new to the topic this year. For two weeks one of my hospital room-mates was a teacher. We talked a great deal about the educational system in British Columbia. It came down to two conclusions. First, school is dumb the way it functions in this province below university level. Second, the philosophy and the mechanics of education are every bit as bone-headed, and inhibiting as they were in the wasted years I endured them.

If you multiply Mark, Jack and Bobby by the numbers of boys and girls in this province who look on school as a drag instead of the adventure it could be so easily then education is far and away the most important portfolio in the new government.

I never drop those boys at the school without thinking of my student years when a classroom was little better than a prison, when I was in constant rebellion against a discipline that destroyed the learning process, when the way to satisfy your teacher and your parents was to memorize, never to understand.

The day that I finally walked out (and straightaway into a newspaper office) was the day that my education began, that I was compelled to develop the inquiring mind that had been a liability in the classroom and, it seems clear, still is. The world of literature, of history, of geography, the wonderful world of knowledge, opened only when I escaped from those four walls. That world might have opened up in university. I think it would have. But if education was what I'd been enduring I wanted no more of it.

My teacher friend in hospital talked of "the conspiracy of the system." Most teachers, in his opinion, are only too well aware that a majority of their pupils are turned off by school. He calls the teacher-student relationship the world's widest generation gap. But the system requires the force feeding of indigestible fact and the proof of performance in grading. A teacher may strive to make his subject interesting, even entertaining, but the system is against him.

Some, he told me, rationalize that, if nothing else, the system gives the student a method of learning, that he acquires work habits and memory retention. That works with perhaps one in every 10 students. The kind of boys and girls who appear on the Reach For The Top quiz, downright dazzling in their range of programmed knowledge, are those who survive or even thrive on the tedium. For the others it induces only resentment, apprehension and the decision to drop out at the first opportunity.

I think if my three young friends were able to articulate their feelings to Mrs. Dailly it would come down to the simple fact that school offers little or nothing that's pleasurable. Even in such small boys it induces tension, anxiety and a hostility to all teachers.

They will discover much later in life that learning is fun, perhaps the greatest fun there is. With any luck at all they'll discover that poetry expands the soul when there is no need to memorize it or define its meter. They'll discover wonder, beauty and truth in literature when there's no need to analyze the grammatical structure of every sentence. They'll discover, in short, the joy of broadening their minds that learning is all about.

If schools are to encourage that process rather than blunt or destroy it they must make themselves attractive to Mark, Jack and Bobby, the consumers.

They must, first of all, eliminate the grotesque system of examinations, the tyranny that dominates the whole of the school year. They must, as well, turn to new techniques, to film and discussion and activities outside the classroom, to any possible device that will interest, excite and challenge receptive young minds. They must make it a wonderful place to go each week-day morning.

That's the job, really, that faces the new minister of education. There could be no tougher or more rewarding assignment.

West Coast Weather Turning Wetter

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The pattern of weather is changing along the Pacific coast, says a leading scientist at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in California.

But in what direction, with what intensity and for how long? These are questions he and his colleagues leave unanswered.

"We have evidence that a new climatic regime has established itself on the Pacific coast," said Dr. John D. Isaacs, director of marine life research at Scripps.

One reason: a weakening of the so-called California Current, a cold oceanic river which flows down the coast from British Columbia. Swimmers and fishermen have noticed the water is warmer than usual this summer.

Isaacs says there is a definite interaction between atmospheric weather and water mass. With less rough weather in the North Pacific, the tendency is to get a more sluggish California current.

It's been apparent for a long time that that current has shielded California from tropical storms, he says. Tropical storms in the past frequently came as far north as El Rosario in Mexico.

Hurricanes feed on the heat they extract from the ocean, explains Robert Born, a Scripps research assistant. Storms diminish in strength as the temperature dips.

So if the cold California Current loses some of its punch, things happen.

There's been a tremendous increase in coastal thunderstorms," says Isaacs. "Up until 1958-59, thunderstorm frequency on the coast was one every two years. Now we get a lot of them a year."

He said more than twice the normal amount of rain has fallen in British Columbia and the worst drought in the history of the Pacific Southwest is also under way.

"We just know the climate is playing a new tune. It may last a few years — or as long as 50."

In Victoria, oceanographer Louis Hobson, assistant professor in UVic's biology department, pointed out the immense factors involved in weather patterns.

The major ocean currents are affected by major wind patterns above them, he said. And shifts in wind pattens are closely related to the amount of energy the earth receives from the sun.

Hobson said he is sure the Scripps observations of water temperatures have been very good. But he suggested it's "a bit of a long shot" to say the weather anomolies seen on land are tied to changes known to be going on in water.

They may prove ultimately to be connected, he said. Meanwhile, there have been some "very theoretical" links drawn by others between weather conditions on the east coast of North America and water conditons in the Pacific Northwest.

In Vancouver, Dr. Ron Burling of the Institute of Oceanography at UBC, said he was suspicious of the Scripps findings.

"It might be," he said. "Really, we don't know. We really don't know how to solve the dynamics of the atmosphere."

John Pashold, weatherman at the Vancouver airport weather office, said "It's possible individual storms have less tendency to be broken up before reaching the coast, but it's news to me that we've been receiving twice as much rainfall as normal."

Oak Bay Pushes For Spill Control

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Oak Bay council has written Prime Minister Trudeau asking for swift implimentation of regulations governing marine traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The other corps municipalities are expected to follow suit.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said today that she asked the other three mayors Friday to write the prime minister, stressing the urgency for action.

"We sent a letter to Mr. Trudeau, enclosing the Times' picture and coverage of last week's collision of the C. E. Dant and the Aegean Sea!" she said.

"I have asked the other mayors for their councils' support in this. We need a strong voice and some quicker action."

Mayor Elford said her council urged the federal government to implement regulations proposed by Victoria MP David Groos. These would require the United States and Canada to set down joint guidelines for traffic lanes and control of vessels entering the strait.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young promised that his council would act on Mayor Elford's proposal at tonight's council mteting.

"I'm sure that council will realise the need to support Oak Bay's stand. Mr. Groos' proposal is the best one put forward so far," he said, "and I hope the federal government will get on with it."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said he, too, would support Oak Bay's stand although he had misgivings about the timing of Groos' proposal.

"I find this so much blatant pre-election politicking," he said. "The man has had all kinds of time to sell his proposals to his associates on the necessity of this obviously urgent matter."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis is in Vancouver for the meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

In his absence, acting mayor Leslie Passmore said he was confident that Saanich would lend its support.

"I feel reasonably sure that Saanich council will support any move to give Mr. Groos support," he said, adding that any movement designed to cut down the threat of oil pollution was "like motherhood, you don't knock it."

Anti-Noise Bylaw 'Can't Be Enforced'

The chairman of Saanich council legislative committee has misgivings about a proposed anti-noise bylaw the municipality hopes to pass this year.

Now in draft form, the bylaw has no aids to enforcement of a technical nature, such as criteria for measuring sound or identifying a scale of sound values with permissable limits.

Ald. Alan Newberry said such a bylaw remains very general and would be subject to opinion in the matter of offences.

"I'm not enthused with it," Newberry said.

Municipal solicitor Douglas Patterson, who will attend the next legislative committee meeting toward the end of September, has been asked for an opinion on whether the bylaw in its present form is enforceable.

The draft was welcomed by council early in the summer and Mayor Hugh Curtis has expressed a desire to have a final version presented to aldermen before the end of the year.

Museum's Private Backers Shape Modern History

Contributions from labor groups and private industry of more than $100,000 have enabled the B.C. Provincial Museum to put together its highly successful modern history exhibits.

Museum authorities report that more than 600,000 visitors have seen the exhibition since it opened in July.

The Royal Bank contributed $15,000 toward a full-scale replica of Captain George Vancouver's HMS Discovery.

Woodward's gave $12,000 towards a maritime history gallery with models of ships. The display is about half completed.

Royal Trust gave $10,000 towards restoration of a 1930 amphibious biplane and B.C. Hydro gave $10,000 towards restoration of an old streetcar, similar to the type once used in Victoria.

The Bank of Commerce donated $15,000 for construction of a large water wheel exhibit in the gold rush section of the museum and the Bank of Montreal gave $10,000 for an agricultural display similar to an original settlement in the Peace River area.

The B.C. Federation of Labor gave $10,000 for a modern-day exhibit and the Council of Forest Industries $15,000 for a sawmill exhibit.

Other donations have come to the museum over the last several years which have gone towards the modern history section.

Museum director Bristol Foster said the museum is dependent upon contributions from industry and labor to put together exhibits like those in the modern history section.

He said there is a possibility this may change with the new government but at present, the museum's budget is too small to allow for self-financed development.

Four-Year Sentence Given Armed Robber

A 22-year-old man was sentenced to four years' imprisonment by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today after pleading guilty to a charge of armed robbery.

Donald Wickham, of 3202 Douglas Street, was arrested Aug. 26 after police received a report that five men armed with two shotguns and wearing stockings over their faces, were seen walking up a gravel driveway at 211 Helmcken Road.

The men gained entry to the building by breaking a living room window. A sum of $275 was stolen from one of the occupants.

Speaking on his behalf as a character witness was Wickham's wife, who said: "I don't think he was capable of doing something like that without quite a bit of influence."

Prosecutor John MacIntyre said this crime was planned in advance, calculated and premeditated, but "this man is not a ringleader."

Inmate Missing Since Sunday

An inmate from William Head minimum security institution has been missing since Sunday, Colwood RCMP said today.

Police said prison officials reported the escape of Kenneth Graham Moorehouse, 24, at 12:30 a.m. Sept. 11. The escape occurred sometime between 6:30 a.m. and 11 p.m. Sept. 10.

"We've followed a few leads but came up with nothing so far," police said.

Tisdalle Now Eyes Federal SC Seat

John Tisdalle, Social Credit MLA for Saanich and the Islands for the past 19 years, announced today he is seeking the Socred nomination in the federal constituency of Esquimalt-Saanich.

No date has been set for the party's nominating meeting. But it is expected to be hotly contested as former Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch, defeated in the Aug. 30 election, also may be running for the nomination. Bruch declined to comment on whether he would be running, saying only he is "considering the matter."

Tisdalle was defeated in his bid for nomination in the Saanich and the Islands provincial riding prior to the Aug. 30 election, by lawyer Foster Isherwood.

He said he decided to seek nomination after attending "a highly successful meeting" of the British Columbia federal Social Credit party over the weekend.

Delegates to the meeting decided to run candidates in all 23 B.C. ridings compared to the 19 seats contested in 1968—when the Socreds were wiped out federally in the province.

Bruch, who also attended the meeting, said there were predictions that Social Credit could gain about six seats Oct. 30, returning to its 1957 federal level.

Welfare Refund Likely

For the second year running Victoria may be headed for a substantial refund of welfare costs from the provincial government.

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of city council's welfare committee, is cautious about making any predictions until the year is out, but he did admit today the signs are very encouraging.

Earlier this year Victoria received a $137,000 refund on over-budgeted 1971 costs.

However, Tindall said Victoria has saved $257,600 in the seven months to the end of July this year a saving of about $35,000 a month—and as municipalities pay 15 per cent of welfare costs this means a net saving already of about $40,000.

Tindall stressed that this trend doesn't ensure a guaranteed saving by year's end, as welfare costs are evened out across the province and a cost reduction in one area isn't necessarily significant.

He did concede, though, that "in all likelihood" similar savings would be effected across the province with resulting benefits to taxpayers.

Victoria's figures show a significant decrease in the number of men on welfare this year, compared with 1971, and Tindall said this would bear out an Edmonton report that increased unemployment insurance benefits earlier this year had taken people off the welfare rolls.

He said he believes local savings may also be due to fewer transient youths visiting the area, and a possible increase in employment.

In Saanich, welfare administrator John Gibson reported that the saving on welfare costs in the eight months to the end of August amounts to about $50,000.

Cod-Catching Welder Competes on the High Seas

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A Victoria man who quit the welding trade to become a commercial fisherman is showing how to pioneer a new industry.

He's Tom Harper, of 3543 Richmond, who's last stint of welding was on his 50-foot Pacific Warrior, which he started building in November 1970, launching her this summer.

While most commercial fishermen here concentrate on salmon, Harper has geared all his efforts toward being the king of the cod-catchers.

He's well on the way.

Cod-catching is not new. Fishermen have been long-lining or dragging for them for years.

Harper does neither. He uses traps, a method introduced by the Americans about two years ago.

It took five weeks for the Pacific Warrior's four-man crew to assemble the 50 traps she uses every time the line is set.

Harper admits that when the Pacific Warrior first set to sea, her decks piled with the unusual equipment, most of his competitors were skeptical.

The first time she came back with tangible evidence of her daily average haul of 3,000 pounds, Pacific Warrior became the boat to watch.

Now, Harper reports, he knows of nine boats being built to follow her example. One is based at Sooke.

After one of Pacific Warrior's 10-day sessions off the edge of the Continental Shelf, about 43 miles offshore, Harper explained some of the advantages of his type of fishing.

"Using traps," he said, "the fish don't end up being drowned before you get them as they sometimes do with dragging. The traps' mesh is designed so that the small ones can get away and you end up with only large, top quality ones."

Pacific Warrior fishes in an area that's a favorite of Japanese and Russian vessels but Harper says he and his men have met nothing but friendliness from their foreign competitors.

They do give him some misgivings, however.

"They're dragging all around us and I have lost part of my gear," he says, "every time we go back we wonder if it's still going to be there."

Using sturdy nylon rope, it takes Harper and his crew about 45 minutes to set three miles of line and between 2½ to 3 hours to bring their gear in.

They often work a 20-hour day, sleeping for about six hours, then starting again. Sometimes the working day stretches to 35 hours.

Before long Harper intends to provide an alternate crew for Pacific Warrior so that she can earn her keep the clock around.

Harper's traps, if they ever get lost, are designed to prevent them acting as a death cell for the fish inside.

"They have a self-destructive panel of cotton thread that will rot, allowing the trapped fish to get away," Harper said.

The local fish processing firm of Oaklands Industries is delighted with the Alaska cod the Pacific Warrior is hauling to her home port, Harper said.

"They're pleased with the quality of the fish and their smoke house is going six days a week."

Ironically, the Japanese draggers that keep Pacific Warrior company on her offshore vigils are probably unaware that she's the first of a Victoria fleet that will challenge their monopoly.

"Before we started in the business," her master says, "most of the cod that was processed here was caught by the Japanese coming all the way across and back through Vancouver."

Women Ex-Prisoners Are Special Concern

JOHANNA HICKEY
. . . women inmates need more help

OTTAWA (CP) — The problems of integrating newly-released penitentiary prisoners into society at large would probably overwhelm all but a select few. But a young woman, recently graduated from university, is meeting the issue head on.

Readjustment to the outside world is hard enough for the majority of white, male prisoners, but the alienation gap to be bridged is doubled for some groups—women, Indians and Metis, and blacks.

Groups Alone

These groups, separated from the mainstream of their own prison sub-culture, as well as from Canadian society outside, are the concern of Johanna Hickey, chief of special programs with the Canadian penitentiary service.

Miss Hickey, who started a group chief in May, is responsible for the establishment of retraining and adjustment projects designed to help these people fit into the community outside when they are released.

A graduate in criminology from the University of Ottawa, she likes the idea of prisoners being specialized into various groups.

"For too long people have been just lumped together," she said in an interview.

Among the special groups she will be concerned with are women, who present particular problems to penologists.

There are a few exceptions, she said, but most women who have come to the point of imprisonment in the federal womens' prison in Kingston, Ont., have seen a complete disintegration of their life and a failure of community resources to deal with their problems.

By the time women reached the penitentiary they have often had a turbulent history of failure in school, work, and marriage. Most were multiple offenders, with a long history of involvement with drugs or bad cheques. Alcohol and drugs were frequently involved.

"These women are hard to deal with," Miss Hickey said.

"They have to begin to believe in themselves again.

Feel Failure

"They suffer from a feeling of failure, and an image of themselves as worthless".

Many needed psychiatric help.

However, a problem is that psychiatry for the prisoner is often presented in a punitive, negative way, she said, while hastening to add that she favors psychiatric treatment.

The fact that there were only 109 women, compared with 7,400 men, in federal jails, reflected to some degree the problems of women who are imprisoned.

Judges and police favor women somewhat, Miss Hickey said, by giving them more chances, reducing charges, fining, or putting them on probation, in cases in which men would be jailed.

Johanna said she felt Canadians generally are "pretty conservative" in their attitudes toward prisons. The well-educated were usually more liberal, but frequently people who were liberal on other issues had rigid views on imprisonment.

She expected changes in the future, however. While Canada at present incarcerated more people proportionally than any other country, alternatives to jail were beginning to appear.

Probation is an alternative frequently used in Britain, she said, and amendments to the Criminal Code will allow more suspended sentences.

Learning Your Place

Are you interested in acquiring added knowledge this fall and winter through attending one or more adult extension courses?

If so, then don't forget A Woman's Place, offered by the division of continuing education at University of Victoria.

I told you something of this program several months ago.

At that time, Dr. Larry Devlin, division director said "we are pleased to offer the course in the belief that it will help those women who are seriously interested to understand the background and present problems of women from a variety of viewpoints."

He then outlined an imaginative approach that would give "every opportunity to draw on the experiences of the women who attend, so this will not be a simple 'teaching-taught' kind of course, but rather a joint exploration of the subject by instructor and students."

The instructor is Mrs. M. Mitchell, who received her B.A. and her Ph.D. in anthropology, sociology and English at University of British Columbia and her M.A. in linguistics at University of Victoria.

She is married, has one child and her area of academic interest in linguistics is in British Columbia Indian languages.

The "women's place" course planned by her is divided in two parts.

The first is arranged to emphasize the relative influence of biological and cultural factors in the behaviour of women.

Through talks and group discussions, many ideas and attitudes, (past and present), about women and her relationship to man, nature and society will be brought to light.

Under the head of the "evolution of women", instinctive behavior will be discussed with reference to the validity of such notions as "maternal instinct" and "female intuition."

In this same term you'll find subjects such as women in primitive and in complex cultures, in minority groups and in historical perspective.

The term will end with a case advanced for the opposition, the history of women's rights in Canada and an assessment of the future of womankind with particular reference to recommendations in the report of the status of women in Canada.

Second term will focus on problems encountered by women in contemporary North American society, with particular reference to the Canadian scene.

Right from an assessment of present day influences on a girl child and their implications for Canadian womanhood, and the relationship of the Canadian woman to boy friend, husband, children and self.

There will be discussions on women and religion. Women at work, woman and poverty and women, property and the law.

A series of four sessions will focus on the female offender, the unmarried mother, the elderly woman and women in positions of authority.

The term will end with a survey of women in Canadian literature and one on important distinctions between American and Canadian women.

First term commences on Thursday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p.m. Sessions will be about two hours in length. Tuition fee is a mere $15 for each term.

Registration is through the division of continuing education at University of Victoria.

If you are seriously interested in learning you are faced with, all from a wide variety of viewpoints, then don't procrastinate. Regmore of your background and the problems ister now.

Count Your Blessings This Woman Advises

DEAR ABBY: Those women who complain because they have small breasts should count their blessings. AND their breasts.

I was always small, and even went to a doctor about it. He laughted and told me that's why they sold so many padded bras.

Well, I never thought it could happen to me, but I had to have both my breasts removed in life-saving surgery.

I couldn't have written this letter six years ago without tears dropping all over the page, but I can say truthfully that now it doesn't bother me. I can thank God for a loving, sensible, understanding husband who I thought I'd lose, but didn't.

Now I am trying to adjust to this topless, bra-less era minus bosoms. It isn't easy, but I'm doing the best I can with the assets I have left.—Off My Chest

DEAR OFF: Your have a soul sister in Marvella Bayh, the beautiful wife of the handsome, young Indiana senator. She told the story of her mastectomy in the June issue of Today's Health Magazine with such courage and candor she was an inspiration to all women who shared that experience.

DEAR ABBY: Please, be the judge in this controversy: When a woman is told, "You think like a man" — is that a compliment or not? Sign this . . . — "A Woman Who Thinks Like A Man"

DEAR WOMAN: It's a compliment only to a woman who thinks a man's thinking is superior to that of a woman's.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to relate two separate incidents and would appreciate your opinion.

The first incident: My husband was driving down a busy city street when he noticed a box in the street which apparently had fallen out of someone's car. He stopped and picked it up. It contained 12 freshly laundered white shirts. The owner's name was on a slip inside, so my husband immediately went to a phone booth and tried to locate him. There were three people by the same name, so my husband called all three. the last one was the man who had just lost his laundry. My husband drove (out of his way) to the home of the man, and he rang the doorbell. The man came to the door, took the box, said, "Thanks, Buddy," and shut the door.

Incident Number Two: Last week my young daughter and I were getting out of our car in a shopping centre when she noticed a woman's billfold on the ground. I picked it up and saw that it had money and credit cards inside. I took it immediately to the parking lot attendant and turned it in. I left my name and phone number.

I went back later and asked if the lady who lost the billfold ever got it back. He said she had. I then asked if he had given her my name and phone number. He said, "Yes." End of story.

Sometimes I wonder, Abby. Does it pay to be honest? — Honest Or Stupid

DEAR HONEST: In the above cases honesty didn't "pay" except in the currency of honor and self respect. If that isn't enough for you, then honesty does "not" pay. The choice is yours.

Roast Chicken Aids Fight Against Rising Prices

By MARY MOORE

It is up to us to defend our own fortresses against the onslaught of rising prices.

I have been to Scotland and England and the same anxious situation prevails there.

My first shopping spree on my return home was a Sherlock-Holmes-like search of the meat counter. I found large roasting chickens at 54 cents per pound among the most economical buys. It was a slack time, so I asked the head butcher to cut it up for me. He cut the back and neck out in one long strip and with that I made soup.

With the remainder I made

CASSEROLE BARBECUED CHICKEN

(NOTE: The number of persons this will serve depends on whether you have young or old children in your family. I think it will serve five hungry grown-ups.)

One cut-up 4½ pound roasting chicken
Two third c. flour
One tsp. salt
Two third c. oil
Two medium onions sliced thin
One c. chopped celery
One half c. catsup
Two c. water
Two tbsp Worcestershire sauce
Two tbsp. brown sugar
One quarter tbsp. black pepper
Two c. kernel corn (canned, fresh frozen or cut fresh from cob)

In a strong paper bag, add salt to flour and dredge all of the chicken pieces in it.

In a very large frying pan, heat oil and brown chicken pieces in it on all sides. Transfer chicken to very large casserole. Tip all but ¼ c. oil from frying pan and add onions, celery and green pepper and saute until limp.

Add catsup, water, Worcestershire sauce, sugar and pepper to pan and mix well. Pour over chicken pieces in casserole.

Cover and bake at 325 deg. F. for 1½ hours. Twenty minutes before serving time add the corn, re-cover and bake 20 minutes longer.

The sauce on this chicken dish has the true barbecue flavor and is lip-licking good.

NOTE: write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10 cents.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Tuesday, Sept. 12, 1972

Nuns of America Spread Their Wings

SEATTLE (AP) — America's Roman Catholic sisterhood is diversifying, the president of the leadership conference of Women Religious of the United States said here recently.

Sister Margaret Brennan, one of 600 nuns gathered here for the conference's annual national assembly, said nuns are taking on more and more duties in the church.

No theological barrier bars women from becoming deacons or ordained priests, Sister Brennan said in an interview, although she indicated some church attitudes will have to change.

Traditionally, most catholic sisters have carried forth the gospel message through their work as educators or nurses, she said. But, Sister Brennan noted, they can be found more often today in jails, counselling inmates or helping migrant workers and the elderly.

Some sisters still wear the traditional habits of their order but others have discovered that their work is facilitated by dressing in a more modern manner, she said.

Childhood Radicalized Dr. Roberts

Once Eyed Priesthood, Now She's Abortionist

By MERYLE SECREST
Special to the Times

WASHINGTON — Among other things, Dr. Barbara Roberts believes that:

—Women will not get a fair hearing from the U.S. Supreme court abortion hearings this fall, because none of its nine members has ever been pregnant.

—Sen. George McGovern will not take a stand on women's issues because they are politically sensitive, so women will have to elect their own candidates.

—American women are still mainly judged by whose wives, mothers and mistresses they are, and not by their own achievements.

Dr. Roberts, who once wishes she could be a Catholic priest, is an abortionist, one of the leaders of the Women's National Abortion Action Coalition and dedicated to the repeal of all the antiabortion laws on the books, all the anticontraceptive laws and all the forced sterilization laws.

She has marched in peaceful demonstrations on Captiol Hill and spoken before hostile audiences who booed and hissed and shook their fists.

She is a part-time volunteer and doctor at Preterm, a D.C. abortion clinic, and appears frequently on TV talk shows.

She is the mother of two children and recently divorced.

How did a shy, serious Catholic girl become so fierce an advocate of a woman's right to reject her traditional role of wife and mother, by even the most radical means?

First there was the idealism of her parents, who moved into the Catholic community of Marycrest in 1948 with others who were "trying to get away from the corrupting values of the city and back to the land."

Next, there is the role Barbara played as surrogate mother, since her mother had a child every year. ("She would have had 13, but there were miscarriages"), feeding and caring for her younger brothers and sisters, aware of her parents' heroic struggles to pay for a Catholic schooling for each of them on a railroad clerk's salary.

Then, as she went from high school student to medical intern and doctor, there began to be incidents as she came up against ingrained attitudes. One was the conflict set up when she married a fellow medical student (he was at Columbia University and she was at Barnard College, then New York University Medical School).

Barbara went on studying through her first pregnancy (Dorie, now 7) and missed a week of classes.

"I felt tremendously guilty about working. Everybody said I would never make it as a doctor and a pediatrics professor told me my place was with my child. I didn't relax until Dorie was 2 or 3 years old, when I was sure I hadn't permanently damaged her," she said.

When Archie (now 2½) came along, his mother was taking a straight internship in the university hospital. While pregnant, she worked six days a week and every other night, on a shift that was 36 hours on and 12 off. Dorie was in a daycare centre, spending the rest of her time with her mother on the ward.

"I was going to prove you could be a great doctor and a great wife and mother at the same time. I was really oppressed," she said.

She says now that one of the formative experiences of her life was when, as she was a medical student serving in an emergency room, she saw a woman who was in shock from an illegal abortion which had caused a massive infection. She was on the point of death. She was saved, but her uterus had to be removed.

She was referring to this incident when, years later, she told a hostile crowd, "as a physician I am tired of telling desperate women that my hands are tied by a law I don't believe in. I am tired . . . of seeing women in septic shock . . . because their own physicians were prohibited from helping them . . ."

The slow evolution of Dr. Barbara Roberts from Catholic smalltown girl to active proponent of abortion and Women's Lib has had its inevitable repercussions on her life. Her marriage foundered and finally ended recently, in part because of their diverging views about her role. She says that he still thought in terms of a wife and mother; she wanted an equitable division of responsibility for the children and housework between them.

Dr. Roberts has also become very interested in the Woman's National Abortion Action Coalition, which seeks to fight anti-abortion laws on a national scale.

Formed last summer, the coalition will be mobilizing this fall with a petitioning campaign to get the Abortion Rights Act Bill, introduced by Rep. Bella Abzug (D—N.Y.), passed. It will also hold an international tibunal Oct. 21-22 in New York to hear "crimes against women", from women who have suffered as a result of present abortion and contraceptive laws, or who have been sterilized against their will.

Barbara is angrily convinced that the U.S. Supreme Court will let women down when it sits this fall on the constitutionality of all abortion laws.

She is disappointed that Sen. George McGovern, who initially supported their movement, has backed away from his stand. But she thinks that "no man who is a tool of big business in this country is going to change things for women. The only way to change things is to do it ourselves. We can't depend on the men. They've had it too good."

HEART CASES NEED EXERCISE MD SAYS

MONTREAL (CP) — People who have coronary artery disease, which leads to heart attacks, should have exercise programs prescribed for them by their doctors, says Dr. Stephen Epstein of Bethesda, Md.

The chief of the cardiology branch of the American National Health Institutes said in an interview that medical practice has changed in the last couple of years so that "exercise is prescribed instead of prohibited" in treating heart and artery disease.

The old idea that people with heart disease should remain inactive, should take it easy . . . is incorrect," he said.

Studies suggest that those who are inactive have higher risks of heart attacks, he said, adding that there are other factors that must also be considered, such as diet and stress.

But research indicates that during exercise the blood forms a "fibrinolytic substance," which helps break down any clots that might form, causing strokes or heart conditions.

Dr. Epstein made the comments after an address to about 300 heart doctors from all parts of North America who are attending a three-day educational session.

In another presentation, Dr. John Ruedy, director of clinical pharmacology at the Montreal General Hospital, described two recent research findings about one of the basic heart drugs.

These studies into bioavailability of digitalis preparations will aid doctors in determining how much drug to order at the beginning of treatment.

The development of radioimmune assay allows levels of digitalis drugs to be measured in the blood of patients and will indicate, in broad muscle, he explained in an interview.

Individual factors, such as other drugs the patient is taking, basic blood chemistry factors and individual health of the patients also may affect the dose response, he said.

But the basic assumption can be made that the amount of drug in the blood reflects the amounts effective on the muscle.

The meeting is sponsored by the American College of Cardiology, the American Society for clinical Pharmacology and Therapeutics and the clinical pharmacology department of Ayerst Laboratories.

Cracker Snack Crumbles In School Cafeterias

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The tasty, time-honored tradition of graham cracker snacks has crumbled in San Francisco's 97 elementary schools.

Harriet Kossove, the school district's new director of cafeteria services, says the crackers are being eliminated because they offer little nutritive value and spoil the children's appetites.

With the start of classes, students received only milk before lunch.

"The kids threw half their lunch away, they were so stuffed full of graham crackers," she said, adding "dental authorities feel that the high carbohydrate content and the texture of the graham cracker encourage dental cavities."

"The nutritive value of a graham cracker is negligible," Miss Kossove said.

James R. Anderson, general manager of the firm which supplied the crackers, American Biscuit Co., of Tacoma, Wash., briskly denied Miss Kossove's charges.

He said the crackers were made with enriched flour according to recently upgraded federal standards, and contained other ingredients such as honey and sugar.

Last year the school district spent $15,423 for 25 tons of graham crackers.

"We've been privileged to have that business for many, many years," Anderson said. "We've helped feed the kids who come to school with nothing in their tummies and helped carry them through til lunch."

While she agreed graham crackers served a useful function in a past without free lunch programs, Miss Kossove said that since 1966 the school district has offered lunches either free or at reduced prices to students who lacked the ability to pay.

"This single graham cracker service is obsolete," she said.

But Lee Dolson, member of the board of education, called the decision "the end of a kindergarten teacher's dream."

"They used to give the kids their milk and a cracker and tell them to lie down on their little mats and it worked just like a tranquilizer," he said.

More Mouth Cancer

CHICAGO (AP) — Women are smoking more and getting more cancer of the mouth as a result, two California dental researchers say.

This is one of the findings of Dr. Sol Silverman Jr. and Dr. Michael Griffith of the University of California School of Dentistry, San Francisco.

Smokers have a six times greater risk of developing cancer of the mouth than nonsmokers, and the risk for women is nine times as great, they wrote in the September issue of the Journal of the American Dental Association.

Women also had recurrence of cancer of the mouth more frequently than men, probably reflecting, they say, "the greater reluctance on the part of women to reduce or stop smoking."

Silverman and Griffith studied 104 men and 70 women with oral cancer, except for cancer of the lip.

Minister Offers 'Trial Run'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A Unitarian minister who calls traditional marriage archaic is offering a one-year "spiritually sanctioned" trial marriage to couples who vow to love, honor and practice contraception.

Rev. Adrian Melott, 25, said he believes that after a spiritualllly-sanctioned year of living together the partners can better decide their future relationship, if any.

The minister said in an interview he considers the ceremony he performs as legally binding as the "oath of marriage." But he adds that there has been no test of the legality of the rite in the eyes of the law. A marriage licence is not required.

The rite has proved unpopular with many religions as well as segments of his own Unitarian faith, says Rev. Melott.

Growing Season Not Yet Ended

The growing season is with us as long as the soil remains warm. We have only to notice the activity of weed seedlings to know that other cool weather plants will germinate just as readily if we have sown the seeds.

Lettuce seeds sown in August have sprouted and the young plants are growing well. Thinning them gives us bright green succulent leaves for combining with the solid crispness of commercial heads we may be buying.

Later the home grown heads will replace the purchased ones just when their prices increase by late fall.

Cherwill is a cool weather herb with a mild tang and bright green delicate tracery of leaf design. Seed self sown from one or two of last year's plants has germinated all through the lettuce coldframe. I use it for salads, soups and vegetable flavoring throughout winter as much for its greenness as for its decorative value.

If summer squash are growing on a compost heat see that the heap is damp, for its porous structure dries out quickly and the huge squash leaves begin wilting. If this happens often, the skins and general texture of the fruits become drier and less suitable for eating raw or for steaming lightly on top of other foods which are being quickly pan-cooked.

The late sowing of dwarf beans are flowering. If recent showers were not dampening the root area, give them a soaking at soil level by hand hosing.

Leeks still have several weeks ahead for growing. See that the soil is well up the stems for blanching. A liquid fertilizer feeding can be given by watering-can after a normal watering.

Tomatoes too should not be neglected. While the fruits are growing, the plants need mosture. With all new blossoms pinched out after September 1, the fruits which have set should come along quickly. Try to ripen some of the vine so as not to miss the fine flavor. A weak solution of fertiolzer poured at the roots will help growth and development.

Clear sunny days are likely to be followed by lower temperatures at night now we are nearing the middle of September. Without cloud cover, a ground frost can form near dawn following any clear night.

Dry sacking, old cotton bedspreads or old thin floor coverings kept handy at the basement door, will prevent frost damage to squash, sweet peppers, tomatoes or a row of dwarf beans.

Put the covers over the plants about nine or 10 at night; remove them before the plants are heated by the next day's sun. Fold them and take indoors again to keep them dry. A damp cover will freeze on the plants. With even a light frost, a damp cover may result in considerable damage to tomato or squash fruits.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Some years ago, George Earle, governor of Pennsylvania, dropped into the United Nations Club in Washington, D.C., and the hostess asked him whether he wouldn't like to play a few rubbers of bridge. Mr. Earle readily accepted.

On one hand, Mr. Earle disapproved of his partner's bidding and didn't hesitate to tell him what he thought. When Mr. Earle became the dummy on the following deal, the hostess subtly beckoned to him.

"Governor Earle," she said, "I don't think you caught the name of your partner. He is Leon Henderson, our new Price Administrator, and he's pretty much of a novice at the game. Please go easy on him."

With a twinkle in his eye, Mr. Earle replied: "If he can't fix prices any better than he bids, this country is going to be in bad shape."

Here is a deal that Mr. Earle defended that evening. He was sitting in the West seat.

SOUTH
♠ A K Q
♡ A Q 7 3
◇ K 7 4
♣ K J 3

The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2 NT | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Five of ♣.

On West's opening lead of the club five, East put up the ten, and South won the trick with his jack. To trick two, declarer led the king of diamonds.

Had Mr. Earle followed with the six-spot, declarer would have fulfilled his contract. On the next diamond lead, West would have been compelled to play the queen — and declarer would have permitted the queen to win.

Whatever West now returned, declarer would have been home, for when he regained the lead, he would play a diamond to dummy's ace, felling East's jack. The board's two remaining diamonds would now be winners.

But on South lead of the diamond king, Earle did not play the six-spot. Instead, he "unblocked" by playing the queen. He knew that South possessed the club king (East's club ten at trick one had denied possession of the king); and he wanted to get his partner into the lead for a club return.

On South's second diamond lead Earle played low, and dummy's ten was inserted. East won the trick with the jack, and returned a club. Earle now made four club tricks, to defeat the contract.

Pilot Dies After Jet Lands Safely

JAKARTA (UPI) — A Pan American World Airways pilot suffered an apparent heart attack and died minutes after he landed a Boeing 707 jetliner at Jakarta airport late Saturday night.

The pilot, whose name was withheld pending notification of next of kin, was pronounced dead on arrival at a hospital.

A company spokesman said the pilot had landed the jetliner normally and taxied to the Jakarta terminal building. He had just shut down the engines and was completing an instrument check when he slumped forward over the controls.

Fellow crew members tried to revive the pilot by administering heart massage and oxygen. He apparently died in the ambulance en route to a hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

'LOSS WILL HELP SOCREDS'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The defeat of the provincial Social Credit Party in the Aug. 30 provincial election is going to help the federal party, national president Gilbert Rondeau told the party's annual B.C. convention Saturday.

Party members who saw Premier W. A. C. Bennett's 20-year-old government defeated at the polls will be fired up to work harder in the federal election Oct. 30 to ensure Socred representation from B.C. in Ottawa, he said.

The Quebec MP from Shefford also said the Progressive Conservatives are "running scared" this time. Rondeau said the Tories have approached several Social Credit MPs in Quebec to run under the Conservative banner.

"To our knowledge they've had no takers," Rondeau said. He said Social Credit would take 40 seats in Quebec and six in B.C.

Len Albanese of Coquitlam, national vice-president of the party, said there were 190 voting delegates at the one-day convention, and about 300 persons in all. Several successful and defeated provincial Socreds were there. None of the 11 defeated cabinet ministers attended.

Albanese said the party would try to persuade Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi to run in the federal election.

Gaglardi, who sent a telegram from Kamloops wishing the convention success, said he had no comment "at this moment" on his possible federal candidacy.

The four Social Credit candidates nominated in B.C. so far for the federal election — Nick Zambus in Vancouver Centre, Ben Schroder is Surrey-White Rock, Stockwell Day in Nanaimo-Cowichan-the Islands, and Delbert Doll in Comox - Alberni were at the convention.

Albanese said that although there was discussion of dropping plans to nominate in all federal ridings in the province, the delegates finally decided that as a matter of principle there should be Socreds in all 23 constituencies.

Albanese also said he had "strong indications" from former MLAs Herb Bruch and John Tisdalle that they would run as federal candidates and both attempt to get the nomination in Esquimalt.

The convention re-elected Diamond Almas, operator of a seafood restaurant in North Vancouver, as B.C. president. Two newcomers, Lou King of Victoria and Barry Blow of Chilliwack, were named vice-

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

9 IN MEMORIAM

WILLIAMS—In loving memory of our son, Deonald L. Williams, whose life was taken, September 10th, 1971, at 840 Tolmie Avenue, Victoria, B.C.
—Ever loved and ever remembered by Mom and Dad.

9 IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband, Stewart E. Woods, and father of Jim and Jack, who passed away September 8, 1967.
Somewhere back of the sunset,
Where loveliness never dies,
You live in a land of glory,
Amidst the blue and gold of the sky.
Your life a beautiful memory
Your absence a silent grief,
You sleep in God's beautiful garden.
In the sunset of perfect peace.
Please God forgive a silent tear,
A secret wish that you were here.
Others have lost that I know,
But you were ours and we loved you so.
—Remembered by his loving wife, Mary, and family.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

How Alcoholics Help Themselves

Recently, I read of a remarkable program in Salt Lake City, in which alcoholics are helping to rehabilitate themselves by helping other people — in this case, fatherless children. I have always been sure that the very best way for anyone to free himself of personal distresses is to help someone else.

As William Dick, a writer who tells about the Salt Lake City program, says, alcoholics are often rejected as being worthless by society. The men who are undergoing treatment at the Salt Lake Veterans' Hospital are "finding themselves" again, and feeling worthwhile, by giving their time to pre-school children in the Head Start program. These youngsters are often neglected, or have been deserted by their fathers.

Mrs. Dee Edwards, director of social services for the program, says that when the alcoholics first go to the school to help the youngsters, they are often withdrawn, with expressionless faces. She says, "We then tell them to be themselves and to have fun with the children. Within a few minutes, the men have forgotten themselves, and are sitting on the floor, playing with blocks, reading stories, or painting with the children."

The men are so helped when playing with the children. They find that they are needed, and they mean something to somebody. Mrs. Edwards says, "It is thrilling to see what just a few hours with these children will do for them. Their whole being seems to change." This points out a very important thing — that people need to feel needed and useful in this world. It can sometimes work wonders when medicine and psychiatric treatment have not done much good.

HEROIN ADDICTION REDUCED IN JAPAN

According to a medical report in Time magazine (June 19, 1972), heroin addiction in Japan has been virtually eliminated by a stringent enforcement of a 1963 law that provided for harsh handling of pushers (selling of heroin) and addicts.

A life sentence is now meted out for anyone caught selling heroin, and mere possession can mean several years in jail. Also, the user of heroin who is caught must be confined for 30 days, which are spent in treatment of his addiction.

Interestingly, the writer of the Time article says that opium eating, which was a major problem in China during the 19th century, never caught on in Japan. The heroin habit began to gain a foothold in Japan after the Second World War. For a while, rival gangs pushed the sale of the drug among prostitutes and in the underworld generally.

QUEBEC DRIVERS GET MAINE BLAST

FARMINGTON, Maine (UPI) — Republican State Sen. Elden H. Shute Jr. wants action to slow down the Canadian drivers who speed through Maine each summer.

"Citizens are concerned about the dangerous driving habits of Canadian drivers, the difficulty in bring Canadians to court to answer charges of violations and the increasing truck traffic hauling pulpwood and logs," Shute said Friday.

Shute has written to the secretary of state in August and the heads of the transporation department and state police, asking for their help.

Shute asked for "immediate steps" to increase co-operation with Quebec provincial officials, posting of signs in French along major roadways from Quebec to the Maine Coast, more financial help for police, elimination of dangerous stretches of highway and more state police in the area during summer months.

"The Canadian on vactation in Maine expects to be treated the same as he is up there, and that means completely overlooked," state trooper Ted Bowen said. "They have an altogether different outlook on speed laws. They have no respect for them."

U.S. Veto Draws Arab Anger

PROTECTED BY SCREENS, British soldiers advance on youths hurling rocks at them from behind barbed-wire barricade during disturbance Saturday in Armagh, Northern Ireland. Fracas erupted when security forces halted an unauthorized march through the town.

Times News Services

The Arab world reacted angrily today to the United States veto of a UN Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its punitive air raids against Lebanon and Syria.

Syria threatened "hard strikes" at the interests of countries it said were supporting Israel.

Relations between Egypt and West Germany also took a sharp turn for the worse.

Egypt rejected today as "unconvincing and insufficient" the West German explanation of statements made following the Munich Olympics slayings last week. Egypt also was angry because the Arabs were referred to as "terrorists," whereas they are regarded in the Arab world as heroes.

There was more violence. A man believed to have been a Moroccan Arab lured Israeli diplomat Ophir Zadok to a Brussels restaurant Sunday night and shot him, wounding him seriously.

He had promised information about an impending Arab attack against an "Israeli object."

This brought an angry statement from an Israeli political source in Tel Aviv who said the shooting illustrated the need for international action against Arab guerrillas intent on attacking Jewish targets throughout the world.

The sequence of events began last Tuesday morning in the Israeli section of the Olympic village in Munich when Arab guerrillas killed two Israeis and kidnapped nine others who subsequently were murdered. Five guerrillas, 11 Israeis and a West German policeman died.

A police spokesman in Munich reported that police arrested a Syrian Arab at Munich airport Sunday on suspicion he might have been connected with the guerrilla attack.

Police said they had nothing definite against him, that it was a precautionary arrest and that the man was being questioned. Three other Arabs were arrested at the time.

The first anti-American statement stemming from the events came today in Cairo where the 18-nation Arab League expressed its "dismay" over the Security Council failure to condemn the Israeli air attacks. The United States vetoed the measure because id did not allude to the Munich massacre.

The Middle East News Agency, in reporting the League statement, said the U.S. use of the veto is "practically a support of Israeli aggression."

A Syrian commentary broadcast over Baghdad Radio and monitored in Beirut said the Israeli strikes against Syria and Lebanon were "premeditated and prepared in advance by the Israeli state of aggression." It said the U.S. veto showed that "Israel is one of the states of the United States of America."

"Our people will use all its potential to repel the aggression and direct hard strikes against the interests of those who are supporting the aggression and standing on the side of the enemy (Israel) giving it all support and aid," the Syrian broadcast said.

Less Down For Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower down payments for home purchasers is one of the main targets of changes to National Housing Act financing announced Monday.

The amendments to NHA regulations raise the maximum mortgage loan for new, single family homes to $30,000 from $25,000 and to 95 per cent of appraised value.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said the changes reduce down payment requirements by as much as one-third on the average NHA-financed house. In some cases, down payments would be cut by as much as 70 per cent.

On single-family dwellings, the amount of income that can be used to cover mortgage payments and property taxes has been increased to 30 per cent from 27 per cent. In calculating income, the full earnings of both husband and wife may be taken into account.

Under the old rules, gross income included only the borrower's earnings plus 50 per cent of the spouse's income.

REDUCE DOWN PAYMENT

The higher maximum loan is aimed at reducing down payments, the CMHC said.

Loans have now been set at a straight 95 per cent of appraised value instead of 95 per cent of the first $20,000 and 80 per cent of the remaining amount.

These rules apply to purchase of new houses.

Where existing homes are being bought, the maximum loan has been increased to $23,000 from $18,000. Loans are still based on 95 per cent of appraised value.

Maximum loans for housing co-operatives and condominium apartments has been raised to $23,000 from $18,000.

The loan ceiling for houses built for rent will rise to $30,000 from $25,000 while the maximum for apartment units jumps to $20,000 from $18,000.

Loans for hostel accommodation for elderly persons will increase to $10,000 a bed from $7,000 per bed. For student housing, the new maximum is $8,000 a bed rather than $7,000.

CMHC will also grant loans for facilities in housing developments apart from parking and recreational space. These facilities can be commercial or noncommercial.

CAN REDUCE RENT

In rental housing projects, the revenue from commercial facilities can be used to reduce rents charged to low-income tenants, the corporation said.

Up to 15 per cent of the maximum loan would be permitted for additional facilities. For example, in a 50-unit rental project the maximum loan would be 50 times $20,000 or $1 million. The loan would be increased by $150,000 for additional facilities.

TROUBLED GAMES WIND UP TODAY

Times News Services

MUNICH — West Germany won the last gold medal of the 20th Olympiad, but that was the host country's closing consolation as the most troubled games in history wound up today before a capacity crowd of 80,000 fans.

The Germans won the equestrian team jumping — final event of the 1972 games — by edging the U.S. Italy took the bronze while Canada, which won the event at Mexico City four years ago, finished sixth.

Before the Olympic flame was extinghished, the games were marred by tragedy, controversy and political bitterness, leaving the Olympic movement — dedicated to peace — shattered and subdued. It was especially so after 11 Israeli Olympians were slain by Arab terrorists.

It will be four years before the next games — to be staged in Montreal in 1976 — and it may take that long before some of the memories of the "troubled games" can be forgotten.

Ulster Blast Kills 3 Men

Times News Services

Three soldiers were killed by "the largest bomb yet" in Northern Ireland, a 500-pound blockbuster which destroyed a 10-ton armored car Sunday night.

Two soldiers inside the six-wheel vehicle were killed outright when the land mine blew up under the armored car, flipped it on its back and sent it flying upside down 20 yards along a quiet country road near Dungannon in County Tyrone.

Two of the other five soldiers in the Saracen vehicle had to be cut free with acetylene torches. One of them died in a military hospital this morning. Two others are in critical condition.

"It was the biggest bomb experienced in Northern Ireland," an army spokesman said. "It had been planted in a culvert beneath the road and was detonated with a wire by guerrillas waiting 70 yards away."

The deaths brought to 125 the number of British troopers killed in three years of Ulster violence, which has taken 557 lives in all.

Meanwhile, in Belfast, members of the parliamentary Protestant Ulster Defense Association (UDA) and the political Vanguard Front Organization (VFO) announced they were patching up their differences to oppose "ineffectual" British Ulster policy.

The new resolve grew out of a gunfight Thursday between UDA men and British troops, the first such army-Protestant clash in three years of troubles.

"There is a far greater determination to present a united, common front than ever before," said Austin Ardill, a ranking officer in VFO, headed by former Home Affairs Minister William Craig.

Vanguard, formed in February, claims a membership of 60,000. The UDA has said it can muster an "army" of 50,000 to counterbalance the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA). Evidence indicates the memberships overlap.

More than 200 workers, angered by British paratroop patrols at their Belfast power plant, walked off their jobs today. Officials said a spread of the protest could lead to blackouts across the city.

The strike was timed to coincide with the funerals of two protestants shot during the clash between Protestants and paratroops in the Shankhill Road area Thursday.

And in Londonderry, political sources said Sean MacStiofain had survived an attempt to oust him as chief of staff of the provisional wing of the IRA only by agreeing to stop bombing civilian targets and to provide better training for IRA bombers.

SOCREDS CALL LEADERSHIP MEET

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bennett, whose Social Credit government was defeated by the New Democratic Party is expected to make way for a new party leader at a convention to be held in May.

George Driediger, president of the Social Credit League, announced today that Bennett had initiated the decision to hold a leadership covention.

Driediger said that although he could not say officially that Bennett is stepping down from the leadership, "that is what I believe will happen."

The 72-year-old premier was not immediately available for comment on his plans for the future, including the question of whether he would consider resigning his seat as an MLA if he should step down as Social Credit leader.

Asked later whether the statement meant that Bennett was going to step down, even though this was not officially announced, Driediger said:

"You've hit the nail on the head. This is what I believe will happen. But it's up to the premier to make any statement on his retirement."

Industry 'Bums' Remain Target

Times News Services

"Corporate welfare bums" — be warned: David Lewis and the New Democratic Party are not through with you yet.

"Anyone who says David Lewis has shot his bolt on the tax issue should be forewarned that we have just cocked the rifle," says Lewis.

"And it's not a single shooter."

The shooting will go on throughout the campaign, he adds, and the "corporate welfare system" will be its leading issue.

Lewis, 63, got his party's campaign for the Oct. 30 federal election officially underway Sunday with a speech to 300 party faithful at the Royal York Hotel before flying to Vancouver today for press interviews and then on to Edmonton tonight.

"Officially," because Lewis really launched his campaign several weeks ago by singling out — and naming — several large corporations he said were being given unfair tax concessions. He called these corporations "corporate welfare bums."

The phrase caught on and the NDP had an issue.

In his Toronto speech, Lewis unveiled "another aspect" of the same theme. Tax deferrments.

By the end of 1971, Lewis said, corporations had amassed some $3.6 billion in tax deferrments — almost $1 billion more than the total budget of the department of national health and welfare.

Naming names and supplying figures as usual, Lewis listed six large corporations which he said together accounted for $1 billion in tax deferrments.

These were, he said, International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., the Steel Company of Canada Ltd., (Stelco) Bell Canada, Alcan Aluminum, Dominion Foundaries and Steel Ltd., (Dofasco) and Imperial Oil.

Under the law, tax deferrments can be obtained with speeded-up write-offs for depreciation and depletion on new equipment.

According to Finance Minister John Turner, the practice has been in the tax law

Kissinger Talks In Moscow

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's special adviser on security affairs, today begins three days of talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Vietnam, trade, European security and attempts to further limit strategic arms will top the agenda.

Two days before Kissinger's arrival, Premier Alexei Kosygin received East German Ambassador Horst Bittner, apparently to hear his country's views on a proposed European security conference.

The two Germanics play key roles in separation from conference on security and cooperation in Europe and for the talks on reduction of armed forces in Central Europe which the U.S. and its allies want to take place simultaneously, political sources said.

Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's highest ranking peace negotiator, also was in Moscow briefly for talks with Soviet officials but he flew today to Peking and it was uncertain whether he had talked with Kissinger. He had talked with Communist officials in Hanoi, Peking and Moscow, raising the possibility of a new round of secret talks.

In Saigon, the Viet Cong issued a new peace statement today, saying it is "prepared to accept a provisional government of national concord that shall be dominated by neither side."

Quebec Split Seen In Trudeau Report

HULL, Que. (CP) — A report said to have been commissioned by Prime Minister Trudeau says the separation of Quebec is feasible and recommends Canada reject a monetary union with an independent Quebec, Jacques Parizeau, Parti Quebecois economist, said Sunday.

He told a party symposium that the report, which he said he obtained from a member of Trudeau's staff, was the result of a study of the PQ manifesto published in April.

In Ottawa the prime minister's office said today it did carry out a study "in a very narrow sense" on the Parti Quebecois manifesto, published last spring.

"We look at a lot of documents and obviously we looked at the implications of this one," a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau said in an interview.

"And that's about where Parizeau's stuff stops being accurate," he added.

The report proposes Canada reject any monetary union and suggests an independent Quebec be urged to devalue its currency by 15 per cent in relationto the Canadian dollar, Parizeau said.

Trudeau believes in independence for Quebec less than any one else, Parizeau said, "but now he is beginning to doubt."

"The general conclusion of the document is that political

Churchmen Arm To Nab Burglars

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — The Rev. Dewey Pinckney looked at the shambles of his St. Mary's Baptist Church sanctuary and became sickened.

Then he became angry. Very angry.

A window air conditioner was pulled from its frame and a communion table was turned over. Thieves had carelessly tossed a bible in front of Pickney's pulpit. The only item actually stolen was a vacuum cleaner.

But this was the last straw for Pinckney. He resolved it would never happen again.

The men of St. Mary's met the next night and formed an armed vigilante committee. The next day, the St. Mary's committee joined with communittees from five other small churches — Mt. Zion Baptist, Iglehart Chapel of God and Christ Church, Marshall Chapel, Macedonia Baptist and Bethel Baptist.

Now, 24 hours a day, except on Sunday when the churches are in use most of the day, vigilantes in a car periodically check the six churches. Sometimes there is one man in the car, sometimes two or three, depending on the time of day or night.

Vigilante committee members are armed.

"It would be kind of hard to get out and look for something like that if we didn't have any means of protection," Pinckney said.

The Rev. Frank Montgomery, pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church, is chairman of the project.

Pinckney5s church and Mt. Zion are in a municipal No-Man's land between Waco and the suburb of Bellmead. The churches lack police protection, except what the sheriff's department can provide.

The other four churches are in Waco.

St. Mary's was dedicated in January. In the first burglary, the thieves made off with a $495 window air conditioner. Pinckney believes the only reason they did not get away with an air conditioner the second time was because they were frightend away.

Mt. Zion was broken into a week before the second St. Mary's bugiary. Iglehart was entered between 1 and 3 p.m. on a recent Sunday and a radio and some of the pastor's things taken.

"The others just figured it was a matter of time," Pinckney said.

Former Spy Tracked Down in Western Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says it has tracked down a Soviet spy whose existence was dismissed last March by the Canadian government as a "fiction partly based on fact."

The newspaper says the spy, known by the code name of Anton Sabotka, lives in a Western Canadian city and works as a salesman.

The Star says that Sabotka admitted his identity and confirmed he was trained by the KGB the Soviet secret police — and assigned to the Canadian west to study targets for sabotage in the event of war or some crisis.

The newspaper said that Sabotka is in his early 40s, was born in Montreal, but returned to Czechoslovakia with his parents at 16. The Star did not disclose Sabotka's actual name or the western city in which he resides because he had refused to talk unless his anonymity was protected.

The newspaper says that Sabotka was recruited by the Soviets in 1964 after a chance meeting with a stranger in a Prague coffee house. He agreed to take spy training in Moscow after the Soviets said he would be stationed in Canada.

After 11 months of training as a spy, he returned to Prague and made application to go back to Canada.

After landing in Canada in 1966, Sabotka took a job as a salesman of ornamental iron railings for $40 a week. He later graduated to a more high paying sales job.

Two months after his arrival, he was approached by the KGB and a meeting was arranged with an official travelling through the west with the Red Army Chorus.

He was told to purchase a short-wave radio receiver and was given a schedule of messages that would start arriving.

The Star says that Sabotak's first assignment was to meet with another spy outside a restaurant in Brockville, Ont. The newspaper says it was during this meeting that Sabotak first came under the surveillance of police — who had been tailing the man with whom he met.

The Star says Sabotka eventually was contacted by RCMP, who had had him under surveillance. He turned over his code book and other equipment to them and answered all questions.

The Star says it first learned of the Sabotka case and published some details of it last March 27. Questions on the story were asked in the House of Commons and Justice Minister Otto Lang said the case was "based on a fictional account which in turn was based partly on fact."

Schools Without Tears The Biggest Job Ahead

A "slow and steady revamping" is in the cards, it would appear, when Eileen Dailly takes over as provincial minister of education, which explains why I hope to arrange a meeting between the lady and three lads named Mark, Jack and Bobby.

It might just convince Mrs. Dailly that the change should be fast and furious.

Mark, Jack and Bobby are the boys I picked up most mornings through the last school year on their way to Colwood Elementary. Now once again they're at the corner when I'm on my way into the office. They are each 10 years of age, though Bobby will be 11 next Thursday. I think you could fairly describe them as typical.

Our running conversation is about school and our common bond is that they hate it almost as much as I hated it. Mark, who is the spokesman for the three, puts it flatly and succinctly: "School is dumb."

★ ★ ★

I bring something new to the topic this year. For two weeks one of my hospital room-mates was a teacher. We talked a great deal about the educational system in British Columbia. It came down to two conclusions. First, school is dumb the way it functions in this province below university level. Second, the philosophy and the mechanics of education are every bit as bone-headed, and inhibiting as they were in the wasted years I endured them.

If you multiply Mark, Jack and Bobby by the numbers of boys and girls in this province who look on school as a drag instead of the adventure it could be so easily then education is far and away the most important portfolio in the new government.

I never drop those boys at the school without thinking of my student years when a classroom was little better than a prison, when I was in constant rebellion against a discipline that destroyed the learning process, when the way to satisfy your teacher and your parents was to memorize, never to understand.

The day that I finally walked out (and straightaway into a newspaper office) was the day that my education began, that I was compelled to develop the inquiring mind that had been a liability in the classroom and, it seems clear, still is. The world of literature, of history, of geography, the wonderful world of knowledge, opened only when I escaped from those four walls. That world might have opened up in university. I think it would have. But if education was what I'd been enduring I wanted no more of it.

My teacher friend in hospital talked of "the conspiracy of the system." Most teachers, in his opinion, are only too well aware that a majority of their pupils are turned off by school. He calls the teacher-student relationship the world's widest generation gap. But the system requires the force feeding of indigestible fact and the proof of performance in grading. A teacher may strive to make his subject interesting, even entertaining, but the system is against him.

Some, he told me, rationalize that, if nothing else, the system gives the student a method of learning, that he acquires work habits and memory retention. That works with perhaps one in every 10 students. The kind of boys and girls who appear on the Reach For The Top quiz, downright dazzling in their range of programmed knowledge, are those who survive or even thrive on the tedium. For the others it induces only resentment, apprehension and the decision to drop out at the first opportunity.

I think if my three young friends were able to articulate their feelings to Mrs. Dailly it would come down to the simple fact that school offers little or nothing that's pleasurable. Even in such small boys it induces tension, anxiety and a hostility to all teachers.

They will discover much later in life that learning is fun, perhaps the greatest fun there is. With any luck at all they'll discover that poetry expands the soul when there is no need to memorize it or define its meter. They'll discover wonder, beauty and truth in literature when there's no need to analyze the grammatical structure of every sentence. They'll discover, in short, the joy of broadening their minds that learning is all about.

If schools are to encourage that process rather than blunt or destroy it they must make themselves attractive to Mark, Jack and Bobby, the consumers.

They must, first of all, eliminate the grotesque system of examinations, the tyranny that dominates the whole of the school year. They must, as well, turn to new techniques, to film and discussion and activities outside the classroom, to any possible device that will interest, excite and challenge receptive young minds. They must make it a wonderful place to go each week-day morning.

That's the job, really, that faces the new minister of education. There could be no tougher or more rewarding assignment.

West Coast Weather Turning Wetter

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The pattern of weather is changing along the Pacific coast, says a leading scientist at the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in California.

But in what direction, with what intensity and for how long? These are questions he and his colleagues leave unanswered.

"We have evidence that a new climatic regime has established itself on the Pacific coast," said Dr. John D. Isaacs, director of marine life research at Scripps.

One reason: a weakening of the so-called California Current, a cold oceanic river which flows down the coast from British Columbia. Swimmers and fishermen have noticed the water is warmer than usual this summer.

Isaacs says there is a definte interaction between atmospheric weather and water mass. With less rough weather in the North Pacific, the tendency is to get a more sluggish California current.

It's been apparent for a long time that that current has shielded California from tropical storms, he says. Tropical storms in the past frequently come as far north as El Rosario in Mexico.

Hurricanes feed on the heat they extract from the ocean, explains Robert Born, a Scripps research assistant. Storms diminish in strength as the temperature dips.

So if the cold California Current loses some of its punch, things happen.

There's been a tremendous increase in coastal thunderstorms," says Isaacs. "Up until 1958-59, thunderstorm frequency on the coast was one every two years. Now we get a lot of them a year."

He said more than twice the normal amount of rain has fallen in British Columbia and the worst drought in the history of the Pacific Southwest is also under way.

"We just know the climate is playing a new tune. It may last a few years — or as long as 50."

In Victoria, oceanographer Louis Hobson, assistant professor in UVic's biology department, pointed out the immense factors involved in weather patterns.

The major ocean currents are affected by major wind patterns above them, he said. And shifts in wind pattens are closely related to the amoit of energy the earth receives from the sun.

Hobson said he is sure the Scripps observations of water temperatures have been very good. But he suggested it's "a bit of a long shot" to say the weather anomolies seen on land are tied to changes known to be going on in water.

They may prove ultimately to be connected, he said. Meanwhile, there have been some "very theoretical" links drawn by others between weather conditions on the east coast of North America and water conditons in the Pacific Northwest.

In Vancouver, Dr. Ron Burling of the Institue of Oceanography at UBC, said he was suspicious of the Scripps findings.

"It might be," he said. "Really, we don't know. We really don't know how to solve the dynamics of the atmosphere."

John Pashold, weatherman at the Vancouver airport weather office, said "it's possible individual storms have less tendency to be broken up before reaching the coast, but it's news to me that we've been receiving twice as much rainfall as normal."

Oak Bay Pushes For Spill Control

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Oak Bay council has written Prime Minister Trudeau asking for swift implimentation of regulations governing marine traffic in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The other corps municipalities are expected to follow suit.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said today that she asked the other three mayors Friday to write the prime minister, stressing the urgency for action.

"We sent a letter to Mr. Trudeau, enclosing the Times' picture and coverage of last week's collision of the C. E. Dant and the Aegean Sea!" she said.

"I have asked the other mayors for their council's support in this. We need a strong voice and some quicker action."

Mayor Elford said her council urged the federal government to implement regulations proposed by Victoria MP David Groos. These would require the United States and Canada to set down joint guidelines for traffic lanes and control of vessels entering the strait.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young promised that his council would act on Mayor Elford's proposal at tonight's council mteting.

"I'm sure that council will realise the need to support Oak Bay's stand. Mr. Groos' proposal is the best one put forward so far," he said, "and I hope the federal government will get on with it."

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said he, too, would support Oak Bay's stand although he had misgivings about the timing of Groos' proposal.

"I find this so much blatant pre-election politicking," he said. "The man has had all kinds of time to sell his proposals to his associates on the necessity of this obviously urgent matter."

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis is in Vancouver for the meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

In his absence, acting mayor Leslie Passmore said he was confident that Saanich would lend its support.

"I feel reasonably sure that Saanich council will support any move to give Mr. Groos support," he said, adding that any movement designed to cut down the threat of oil pollution was "like motherhood, you don't knock it."

Anti-Noise Bylaw 'Can't Be Enforced'

The chairman of Saanich council legislative committee has misgivings about a proposed anti-noise bylaw the municipality hopes to pass this year.

Now in draft form, the bylaw has no aids to enforcement of a technical nature, such as criteria for measuring sound or identifying a scale of sound values with permissable limits.

Ald. Alan Newberry said such a bylaw remains very general and would be subject to opinion in the matter of offences.

"I'm not enthused with it," Newberry said.

Municipal solicitor Douglas Patterson, who will attend the next legislative committee meeting toward the end of September, has been asked for an opinion on whether the bylaw in its present form is enforceable.

The draft was welcomed by council early in the summer and Mayor Hugh Curtis has expressed a desire to have a final version presented to aldermen before the end of the year.

Museum's Private Backers Shape Modern History

Contributions from labor groups and private industry of more than $100,000 have enabled the B.C. Provincial Museum to put together its highly successful modern history exhibits.

Museum authorities report that more than 600,000 visitors have seen the exhibition since it opened in July.

The Royal Bank contributed $15,000 toward a full-scale replica of Captain George Vancouver's HMS Discovery.

Woodward's gave $12,000 towards a maritime history gallery with models of ships. The display is about half completed.

Royal Trust gave $10,000 towards restoration of a 1930 amphibious biplane and B.C. Hydro gave $10,000 towards restoration of an old streetcar, similar to the type once used in Victoria.

The Bank of Commerce donated $15,000 for construction of a large water wheel exhibit in the gold rush section of the museum and the Bank of Montreal gave $10,000 for an agricultural display similar to an original settlement in the Peace River area.

The B.C. Federation of Labor gave $10,000 for a modern-day exhibit and the Council of Forest Industries $15,000 for a sawmill exhibit.

Other donations have come to the museum over the last several years which have gone towards the modern history section.

Museum director Bristol Foster said the museum is dependent upon contributions from industry and labor to put together exhibits like those in the modern history section.

He said there is a possibility this may change with the new government but at present, the museum's budget is too small to allow for self-financed development.

Four-Year Sentence Given Armed Robber

A 22-year-old man was sentenced to four years' imprisonment by Judge William Ostler in provincial court today after pleading guilty to a charge of armed robbery.

Donald Wickham, of 3202 Douglas Street, was arrested Aug. 26 after police received a report that five men armed with two shotguns and wearing stockings over their faces, were seen walking up a gravel driveway at 211 Helmcken Road.

The men gained entry to the building by breaking a living room window. A sum of $275 was stolen from one of the occupants.

Speaking on his behalf as a character witness was Wickham's wife, who said: "I don't think he was capable of doing something like that without quite a bit of influence."

Prosecutor John MacIntyre said this crime was planned in advance, calculated and premeditated, but "this man is not a ringleader."

Inmate Missing Since Sunday

An inmate from William Head minimum security institution has been missing since Sunday, Colwood RCMP said today.

Police said prison officials reported the escape of Kenneth Graham Moorehouse, 24, at 12:30 a.m. Sept. 11. The escape occurred sometime between 6:30 a.m. and 11 p.m. Sept. 10.

"We've followed a few leads but came up with nothing so far," police said.

Moorehouse is described as five-foot, 11 inches, 145 pounds with brown eyes and brown, medium length hair.

Tisdalle Now Eyes Federal SC Seat

John Tisdalle, Social Credit MLA for Saanich and the Islands for the past 19 years, announced today he is seeking the Socred nomination in the federal constituency of Esquimalt-Saanich.

No date has been set for the party's nominating meeting. But it is expected to be hotly contested with former Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch, defeated in the Aug. 30 election, also may be running for the nomination. Bruch declined to comment on whether he would be running, saying only he is "considering the matter."

Tisdalle was defeated in his bid for nomination in the Saanich and the Islands provincial riding prior to the Aug. 30 election, by lawyer Foster Isherwood.

He said he decided to seek nomination after attending "a highly successful meeting" of the British Columbia federal Social Credit party over the weekend.

Delegates to the meeting decided to run candidates in all 23 B.C. ridings compared to the 19 seats contested in 1968—when the Socreds were wiped out federally in the province.

Bruch, who also attended the meeting, said there were predictions that Social Credit could gain about six seats Oct. 30, returning to its 1957 federal level.

Welfare Refund Likely

For the second year running Victoria may be headed for a substantial refund of welfare costs from the provincial government.

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of city council's welfare committee, is cautious about making any predictions until the year is out, but he did admit today the signs are very encouraging.

Earlier this year Victoria received a $137,000 refund on over-budgeted 1971 costs.

However, Tindall said Victoria has saved $257,000 in the seven months to the end of July this year—a saving of about $35,000 a month—and as municipalities pay 15 per cent of welfare costs this means a net saving already of about $40,000.

Tindall stressed that this trend doesn't ensure a guaranteed saving by year's end, as welfare costs are evened out across the province and a cost reduction in one area isn't necessarily significant.

He did concede, though, that "in all likelihood" similar savings would be effected across the province with resulting benefits to taxpayers.

Victoria's figures show a significant decrease in the number of men on welfare this year, compared with 1971, and Tindall said this would bear out an Edmonton report that increased unemployment insurance benefits earlier this year had taken people off the welfare rolls.

He said he believes local savings may also be due to fewer transient youths visiting the area, and a possible increase in employment.

In Saanich, welfare administrator John Gibson reported that the saving on welfare costs in the eight months to the end of August amounts to about $50,000.

Cod-Catching Welder Competes on the High Seas

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A Victoria man who quit the welding trade to become a commercial fisherman is showing how to pioneer a new industry.

He's Tom Harper, of 3543 Richmond, who's last stint of welding was on his 50-foot Pacific Warrior, which he started building in November 1970, launching her this summer.

While most commercial fishermen here concentrate on salmon, Harper has geared all his efforts toward being the king of the cod-catchers.

He's well on the way.

Cod-catching is not new. Fishermen have been long-lining or dragging for them for years.

Harper does neither. He uses traps, a method introduced by the Americans about two years ago.

It took five weeks for the Pacific Warrior's four-man crew to assemble the 50 traps she uses every time the line is set.

Harper admits that when the Pacific Warrior first set to sea, her decks piled with the unusual equipment, most of his competitors were skeptical.

The first time she came back with tangible evidence of her daily average haul of 3,000 pounds, Pacific Warrior became the boat to watch.

Now, Harper reports, he knows of nine boats being built to follow her example. One is based at Sooke.

After one of Pacific Warrior's 10-day sessions off the edge of the Continental Shelf, about 43 miles offshore, Harper explained some of the advantages of his type of fishing.

"Using traps," he said, "the fish don't end up being drowned before you get them as they sometimes do with dragging. The traps' mesh is designed so that the small ones can get away and you end up with only large, top quality ones."

Pacific Warrior fishes in an area that's a favorite of Japanese and Russian vessels but Harper says he and his men have met nothing but friendliness from their foreign competitors.

They do give him some misgivings, however.

"They're dragging all around us and I have lost part of my gear," he says, "every time we go back we wonder if it's still going to be there."

Using sturdy nylon rope, it takes Harper and his crew about 45 minutes to set three miles of line and between 2½ to 3 hours to bring their gear in.

They often work a 20-hour day, sleeping for about six hours, then starting again. Sometimes the working day stretches to 35 hours.

Before long Harper intends to provide an alternate crew for Pacific Warrior so that she can earn her keep the clock around.

Harper's traps, if they ever get lost, are designed to prevent them acting as a death cell for the fish inside.

"They have a self-destructive panel of cotton thread that will rot, allowing the trapped fish to get away," Harper said.

The local fish processing firm of Oaklands Industries is delighted with the Alaska cod the Pacific Warrior is hauling to her home port, Harper said.

"They're pleased with the quality of the fish and their smoke house is going six days a week."

Ironically, the Japanese draggers that keep Pacific Warrior company on her offshore vigils are probably unaware that she's the first of a Victoria fleet that will challenge their monopoly.

"Before we started in the business," her master says, "most of the cod that was processed here was caught by the Japanese coming all the way across and back through Vancouver."

U.S. Veto Draws Arab Anger

Times News Services

The Arab world reacted angrily today to the United States veto of a UN Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its punitive air raids against Lebanon and Syria.

Syria threatened "hard strikes" at the interests of countries it said were supporting Israel.

Relations between Egypt and West Germany also took a sharp turn for the worse.

Egypt rejected today as "unconvincing and insufficient" the West German explanation of statements made following the Munich Olympics slayings last week. Egypt also was angry because the Arabs were referred to as "terrorists," whereas they are regarded in the Arab world as heroes.

There was more violence. A man believed to have been a Moroccan Arab lured Israeli diplomat Ophir Zadok to a Brussels restaurant Sunday night and shot him, wounding him seriously.

He had promised information about an impending Arab attack against an "Israeli object."

This brought an angry statement from an Israeli political source in Tel Aviv who said the shooting illustrated the need for international action against Arab guerrillas intent on attacking Jewish targets throughout the world.

The sequence of events began last Tuesday morning in the Israeli section of the Olympic village in Munich when Arab guerrillas killed two Israeis and kidnapped nine others who subsequently were murdered. Five guerrillas, 11 Israeis and a West German policeman died.

A police spokesman in Munich reported that police arrested a Syrian Arab at Munich airport Sunday on suspicion he might have been connected with the guerrilla attack.

Police said they had nothing definite against him, that it was a precautionary arrest and that the man was being questioned. Three other Arabs were arrested at the time.

The first anti-American statement stemming from the events came today in Cairo where the 18-nation Arab League expressed its "dismay" over the Security Council failure to condemn the Israeli air attacks. The United States vetoed the measure because id did not allude to the Munich massacre.

The Middle East News Agency, in reporting the League statement, said the U.S. use of the veto is "practically a support of Israeli aggression."

A Syrian commentary broadcast over Baghdad Radio and monitored in Beirut said the Israeli strikes against Syria and Lebanon were "premeditated and prepared in advance by the Israeli state of aggression." It said the U.S. veto showed that "Israel is one of the states of the United States of America."

"Our people will use all its potential to repel the aggression and direct hard strikes against the interests of those who are supporting the aggression and standing on the side of the enemy (Israel) giving it all support and aid," the Syrian broadcast said.

NOT IN RACE, SAYS BENNETT

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, whose Social Credit governernment was defeated by the New Democratic Party in the Aug. 30 provincial election, said today he will not contest a party leadership convention to be held next May.

However, he declined to comment when asked whether he would resign his seat as an MLA, or whether he would support any particular candidate for the leadership.

George Driediger, president of the Social Credit League, announced today that Bennett had initiated the decision to hold a leadership convention.

Asked later whether the statement meant that Bennett was going to step down, even though this was not officially announced, Driediger said:

"You've hit the nail on the head. This is what I believe will happen. But it's up to the premier to make any statement on his retirement."

Less Down For Homes

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower down payments for home purchasers is one of the main targets of changes to National Housing Act financing announced Monday.

The amendments to NHA regulations raise the maximum mortgage loan for new, single family homes to $30,000 from $25,000 and to 95 per cent of appraised value.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. said the changes reduce down payment requirements by as much as one-third on the average NHA-financed house. In some cases, down payments would be cut by as much as 70 per cent.

On single-family dwellings, the amount of income that can be used to cover mortgage payments and property taxes has been increased to 30 per cent from 27 per cent. In calculating income, the full earnings of both husband and wife may be taken into account.

Under the old rules, gross income included only the borrower's earnings plus 50 per cent of the spouse's income.

REDUCE DOWN PAYMENT

The higher maximum loan is aimed at reducing down payments, the CMHC said.

Loans have now been set at a straight 95 per cent of appraised value instead of 95 per cent of the first $20,000 and 80 per cent of the remaining amount.

These rules apply to purchase of new houses.

Where existing homes are being bought, the maximum loan has been increased to $23,000 from $18,000. Loans are still based on 95 per cent of appraised value.

Maximum loans for housing co-operatives and condominium apartments has been raised to $23,000 from $18,000.

The loan ceiling for houses built for rent will rise to $30,000 from $25,000 while the maximum for apartment units jumps to $20,000 from $18,000.

Loans for hostel accommodation for elderly persons will increase to $10,000 a bed from $7,000 per bed. For student housing, the new maximum is $8,000 a bed rather than $7,000.

CMHC will also grant loans for facilities in housing developments apart from parking and recreational space. These facilities can be commercial or non-commercial.

CAN REDUCE RENT

In rental housing projects, the revenue from commercial facilities can be used to reduce rents charged to low-income tenants, the corporation said.

Up to 15 per cent of the maximum loan would be permitted for additional facilities. For example, in a 50-unit rental project the maximum loan would be 50 times $20,000 or $1 million. The loan would be increased by $150,000 for additional facilities.

TROUBLED GAMES WIND UP TODAY

Times News Services

MUNICH — West Germany won the last gold medal of the 20th Olympiad, but that was the host country's closing consolation as the most troubled games in history wound up today before a capacity crowd of 80,000 fans.

The Germans won the equestrian team jumping — final event of the 1972 games — by edging the U.S. Italy took the bronze while Canada, which won the event at Mexico City four years ago, finished sixth.

Before the Olympic flame was extinguished, the games were marred by tragedy, controversy and political bitterness, leaving the Olympic movement — dedicated to peace — shattered and subdued. It was especially so after 11 Israeli Olympians were slain by Arab terrorists.

It will be four years before the next games — to be staged in Montreal in 1976 — and it may take that long before some of the memories of the "troubled games" can be forgotten.

Ulster Blast Kills 3 Men

Times News Services

Three soldiers were killed by "the largest bomb yet" in Northern Ireland, a 500-pound blockbuster which destroyed a 10-ton armored car Sunday night.

Two soldiers inside the six-wheel vehicle were killed outright when the land mine blew up under the armored car, flipped it on its back and sent it flying upside down 20 yards along a quiet country road near Dungannon in County Tyrone.

Two of the other five soldiers in the Saracen vehicle had to be cut free with acetylene torches. One of them died in a military hospital this morning. Two others are in critical condition.

"It was the biggest bomb experienced in Northern Ireland," an army spokesman said. "It had been planted in a culvert beneath the road and was detonated with a wire by guerrillas waiting 70 yards away."

The deaths brought to 125 the number of British troopers killed in three years of Ulster violence, which has taken 557 lives in all.

Meanwhile, in Belfast, members of the parliamentary Protestant Ulster Defense Association (UDA) and the political Vanguard Front Organization (VFO) announced they were patching up their differences to oppose "ineffectual" British Ulster policy.

The new resolve grew out of a gunfight Thursday between UDA men and British troops, the first such army-Protestant clash in three years of troubles.

"There is a far greater determination to present a united, common front than ever before," said Austin Ardill, a ranking officer in VFO, headed by former Home Affairs Minister William Craig.

Vanguard, formed in February, claims a membership of 60,000. The UDA has said it can muster an "army" of 50,000 to counterbalance the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA). Evidence indicates the memberships overlap.

More than 200 workers, angered by British paratroop patrols at their Belfast power plant, walked off their jobs today. Officials said a spread of the protest could lead to blackouts across the city.

The strike was timed to coincide with the funerals of two Protestants shot during the clash between Protestants and paratroops in the Shankhill Road area Thursday.

And in Londonderry, political sources said Sean MacStiofain had survived an attempt to oust him as chief of staff of the provisional wing of the IRA only by agreeing to stop bombing civilian targets and to provide better training for IRA bombers.

Kissinger Talks In Moscow

Times News Services

Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's special adviser on security affairs, today begins three days of talks with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Vietnam, trade, European security and attempts to further limit strategic arms will top the agenda.

Two days before Kissinger's arrival, Premier Alexei Kosygin received East German Ambassador Horst Bittner, apparently to hear his country's views on a proposed European security conference.

The two Germanies play key roles in preparation for a conference on security and co-operation in Europe and for the talks on reduction of armed forces in Central Europe which the U.S. and its allies want to take place simultaneously, political sources said.

Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's highest ranking peace negotiator, also was in Moscow briefly for talks with Soviet officials but he flew today to Paris and it was uncertain whether he had talked with Kissinger. He had talked with Communist officials in Hanoi, Peking and Moscow, raising the possibility of a new round of secret talks.

In Saigon, the Viet Cong issued a new peace statement today, saying it is "prepared to accept a provisional government of national concord that shall be dominated by neither side."

NEWS BRIEFS

Fortunes Told

SEOUL (UPI) — President Nixon will be re-elected and Nationalist China will be annexed to the People's Republic of China in five or six years. These were some of the predictions made by world fortune-tellers and astrologers at the end of a three-day conference in Seoul Sunday.

Wrong Color

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — A girl in labor waited two hours for a desperately-needed emergency operation while the qualified doctor at her side could do nothing because he was not white, it was reported here Sunday.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times says a white surgeon eventually performed the operation, but the girl, 18-year-old Caroline Amas, who was a Cape Colored or mixed race, died three days later after giving birth to a daughter.

Solidarity Urged

BAL HARBOR, Fla. (CP) — Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, called today for international solidarity among labor unions to curb the power of multinational corporations. MacDonald told the United Rubber, Cork, Linoleum and Plastic Workers of America that unions must stand united to face corporations "able to manipulate individual workers, local governments and even countries."

Quebec Split Seen In Trudeau Report

HULL, Que. (CP) — A report said to have been commissioned by Prime Minister Trudeau says the separation of Quebec is feasible and recommends Canada reject a monetary union with an independent Quebec, Jacques Parizeau, Parti Quebecois economist, said Sunday.

He told a party symposium that the report, which he said he obtained from a member of Trudeau's staff, was the result of a study of the PQ manifesto published in April.

In Ottawa the prime minister's office said today it did carry out a study "in a very narrow sense" on the Parti Quebecois manifesto, published last spring.

"We look at a lot of documents and obviously we looked at the implications of this one," a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau said in an interview.

"And that's about where Parizeau's stuff stops being accurate," he added.

The report proposes Canada reject any monetary union and suggests an independent Quebec be urged to devalue its currency by 15 per cent in relation to the Canadian dollar, Parizeau said.

Trudeau believes in independence for Quebec less than any one else, Parizeau said, "but now he is beginning to doubt."

"The general conclusion of the document is that political

Industry 'Bums' Remain Target

Times News Services

"Corporate welfare bums" — be warned: David Lewis and the New Democratic Party are not through with you yet.

"Anyone who says David Lewis has shot his bolt on the tax issue should be forewarned that we have just cocked the rifle," says Lewis.

"And it's not a single shooter."

The shooting will go on throughout the campaign, he adds, and the "corporate welfare system" will be its leading issue.

Lewis, 63, got his party's campaign for the Oct. 30 federal election officially under way Sunday with a speech to 300 party faithful at the Royal York Hotel before flying to Vancouver today for press interviews and then on to Edmonton tonight.

"Officially," because Lewis really launched his campaign several weeks ago by singling out — and naming — several large corporations he said were being given unfair tax concessions. He called these corporations "corporate welfare bums."

The phrase caught on and the NDP had an issue.

In his Toronto speech, Lewis unveiled "another aspect" of the same theme. Tax deferrments.

By the end of 1971, Lewis said, corporations had amassed some $3.6 billion in tax deferrments — almost $1 billion more than the total budget of the department of national health and welfare.

Naming names and supplying figures as usual, Lewis listed six large corporations which he said together accounted for $1 billion in tax deferrments.

These were, he said, International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., the Steel Company of Canada Ltd., (Stelco) Bell Canada, Alcan Aluminum, Dominion Foundaries and Steel Ltd., (Dofasco) and Imperial Oil.

Under the law, tax deferrments can be obtained with speeded-up write-offs for depreciation and depletion on new equipment.

According to Finance Minister John Turner, the practice has been in the tax law

Churchmen Arm To Nab Burglars

WACO, Tex. (UPI) — The Rev. Dewey Pinckney looked at the shambles of his St. Mary's Baptist Church sanctuary and became sickened.

Then he became angry. Very angry.

A window air conditioner was pulled from its frame and a communion table was turned over. Thieves had carelessly tossed a bible in front of Pickney's pulpit. The only item actually stolen was a vacuum cleaner.

But this was the last straw for Pinckney. He resolved it would never happen again.

The men of St. Mary's met the next night and formed an armed vigilante committee. The next day, the St. Mary's committee joined with committees from five other small churches — Mt. Zion Baptist, Iglehart Chapel of God and Christ Church, Marshall Chapel, Macedonia Baptist and Bethel Baptist.

Now, 24 hours a day, except on Sunday when the churches are in use most of the day, vigilantes in a car periodically check the six churches. Sometimes there is one man in the car, sometimes two or three, depending on the time of day or night.

Vigilante committee members are armed.

"It would be kind of hard to get out and look for something like that if we didn't have any means of protection," Pinckney said.

The Rev. Frank Montgomery, pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church, is chairman of the project.

Pinckney's church and Mt. Zion are in a municipal No-Man's land between Waco and the suburb of Bellmead. The churches lack police protection, except what the sheriff's department can provide.

Former Spy Tracked Down in Western Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says it has tracked down a Soviet spy whose existence was dismissed last March by the Canadian government as a "fiction partly based on fact."

The newspaper says the spy, known by the code name of Anton Sabotka, lives in a Western Canadian city and works as a salesman.

The Star says that Sabotka admitted his identity and confirmed he was trained by the KGB the Soviet secret police and assigned to the Canadian west to study targets for sabotage in the event of war or some crisis.

The newspaper said that Sabotka is in his early 40s, was born in Montreal, but returned to Czechoslovakia with is parents at 16. The Star did not disclose Sabotka's actual name or the western city in which he resides because he had refused to talk unless his anonymity was protected.

The newspaper says that Sabotka was recruited by the Soviets in 1964 after a chance meeting with a stranger in a Prague coffee house. He agreed to take spy training in Moscow after the Soviets said he would be stationed in Canada.

After 11 months of training as a spy, he returned to Prague and made application to go back to Canada.

After landing in Canada in 1966, Sabotka took a job as a salesman of ornamental iron railings for $40 a week. He later graduated to a more high paying sales job.

Two months after his arrival, he was approached by the KGB and a meeting was arranged with an official travelling through the west with the Red Army Chorus.

He was told to purchase a short-wave radio receiver and was given a schedule of messages that would start arriving.

The Star says that Sabotka's first assignment was to meet with another spy outside a restaurant in Brockville, Ont. The newspaper says it was during this meeting that Sabotka first came under the surveillance of police who had been tailing the man with whom he met.

The Star says Sabotka eventually was contacted by RCMP, who had had him under surveillance. He turned over his code-book and other equipment to them and answered all questions.

The Star says it first learned of the Sabotka case and published some details of it last March 27. Questions on the story were asked in the House of Commons and Justice Minister Otto Lang said the case was "based on a fictional account which in turn was based partly on fact."
